Mr. Coolidge on Russia.
American Building Ideas.
Farm Relief Attention.
Not Elephants, Microbes.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

IN HIS INTERESTING daily article, written for the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph and other newspapers, Calvin Coolidge takes up activities of the Russian government in America. Says he:

"It is not the practice to inquire very minutely into the beliefs of foreigners coming here temporarily for genuine mercantile purposes."

Spoken like a true New Englander.

CALVIN COOLIDGE says also:

"Our people are so thoroughly attached to their own system of self-government that we need not feel it is in imminent danger."

Thus speaks a common-sense American.

If a few "wild-haired and wild-eyed Communists," to use the common description, can upset the work of Washington, Franklin, Jefferson and Lincoln, to say nothing of McKinley, Roosevelt, Wilson and Harding, then we need a more solid government.

IT IS NOW alleged that so-called "documents" discovered in New York, proving that "Amtorg," spending Russian money here, is a disguised agency for Bolshevik propaganda, were forgeries. A New York printer confesses that he manufactured the alleged official Russian letter-heads.

THE APPALLING EXTENT of Italy's disaster is due to the fact that in building, even small dwellings, walls and floors are nearly all made of stone, roofs of heavy tile. Earthquakes causing even a slight disturbance, separating walls, allow heavy stone floors and tiled roofs to fall through, killing the inmates.

IT IS BELIEVED that Mussolini will order dwellings rebuilt of reinforced concrete. Ordinary steel framing is too expensive; lumber, scarce in Italy, is too perishable to suit Italians.

McClintic-Marshall, an American concern, erecting the great bridge across the Hudson River, has devised a method of steel construction, extremely light, little more expensive than wood. Mussolini should investigate that.

THIS WRITER recently erected a very large residence by the McClintic-Marshall method, most satisfactorily.

Earthquake, lightning or gale could not affect it.

AMERICAN "farm relievers" who have recently thus seen wheat go the lowest price in 16 years should be interested in results obtained by Russia.

"Collective farms," many miles long and miles wide, operated by government machines, on modern "mass production" industrial lines, "show a yield to the acre from 40 to 60 per cent higher than nearby individual holdings."

PEASANTS THAT had refused to engage in national farming at first now rush to join the new method.

We are the greatest, noblest, richest, most intelligent people on earth, but we should not disdain to learn, even from 'the despised Bolsheviki."

IN ANCIENT DAYS men gathered to watch elephants, tigers, bears, rhinoceroses and other gigantic animals fight each other or fight gladiators. All interest centered on the BIG enemies of mankind.

Rembrandt painted a most interesting scientific picture of an elephant, with its queerly made knees, and deep wrinkles. He never heard of a microbe.

Today human intelligence is concentrated on enemies too small to be seen, far deadlier than any poisonous snake, or ferocious tiger.

Dr. Thomas F. Rivers, of the Rockefeller Foundation, showed other scientists slides explaining experiments with psittacosis, or parrot disease.

THE GERMS discussed are so small they pass through porcelain filters. No microscope is powerful enough to reveal them.

Science is not even able to explain how the germ of grippe or psittacosis, after years of harmless inactivity, can suddenly spread world-wide, creating havoc, in a few months.

ROW HALTS PRISONERS' DISCHARGE

Magistrate's Plan to Free Racket Suspects Without Hearing Foiled by Officer

Magistrate John J. Sweeney and South Side police clashed over the reputed racket war in that district today when the former refused to go into a hearing of Thomas J. (Goose) Goslin and two associates, charged with operating a clearing house lottery.

Goslin, John Prendergast, of 2026 Spring street, and George Kallaway, of 6 East Meyers avenue, Carrick, had been arrested late yesterday by a squad of plainclothesmen, headed by Patrolman Louis Foster.

ARRESTS ON WARRANTS

The arrests were on warrants which Sweeney had issued at the conclusion of yesterday's hearings in which confectionery store proprietors had named Prendergast as the man who had installed slot machines for Goslin. Kallaway's phone number was given in event the storekeepers had any trouble, testimony revealed.

Goslin and Prendergast were taken into custody at Goslin's home, 1615 Brownsville road, police said today. Goslin is reputed to be one of the two numbers writing bosses of the South Side, in addition to having slot machine dispensing rights.

SWEENEY IN CLASH

When time came for the hearing in South Side Police Court today and the three prisoners were arraigned, Sweeney announced:

"I am going to discharge these men without a hearing."

Patrolman Foster countered:

"You can't do that. They are listed on the calendar for a hearing. You signed the warrant for their arrest yourself. You can dispose of their cases any way you wish to, but you

CITY SWELTERS AS MERCURY SKYROCKETS

Hour-By-Hour Temperatures

Hourly temperatures since midnight follows:

Midnight	77	6 a.m.	75
1 a.m.	76	7 a.m.	78
2 a.m.	75	8 a.m.	80
3 a.m.	73	9 a.m.	81
4 a.m.	72	10 a.m.	86
5 a.m.	74	11 a.m.	88

The second heat wave in a week held sway today, sending the mercury skyrocketing and scorching already-parched fields and crops, with little prospect of abatement.

At the weather bureau, where a temperature of 94 was recorded yesterday, it was indicated that mark likely would be passed late today.

The record for this date, 96 in 1892, may be broken, said Forecaster W. S. Brotzman.

SHOWERS EXPECTED

Widely scattered showers were held probable for tomorrow, bringing a measure of relief from the long drought, but little from the high temperatures.

Suffering in the congested districts of the city is matched by loss to farmers through damage to fruits, vegetables and crops. Low water supply is reported in many districts.

Forecaster Brotzman said the same weather map exists as prevailed during the intense hot spell last week. In the middlewest temperatures are hovering about the 100-degree mark, with light, scattered showers.

FARMS SUFFER SEVERELY

Henry R. Eby, county farm agent, said farmers are being hit severely by the drought.

He said:

"Corn, potatoes, tomatoes and cabbage are being affected by the long dry spell. Meadows are drying up. The size of apples will be reduced because of lack of moisture. The peach crop already was a failure because of cold weather and frost."

Shade trees, lawns and hedges are showing the effects of the drought, in seared leaves and browning sod. Some forest trees are shedding leaves.

The light showers of Monday, which broke the first hot wave, revived vegetation somewhat, reports indicated, but the return of the heat yesterday and today with a parching wind, has caused the drought conditions to become alarming, according to the weather bureau.

Jeweler Follows Friend in Suicide

RICHMOND, Va., July 26.—(Universal)—Gustavus M. Schwarzchild, 40, vice president of Schwarzchild Brothers, jewelers, ended his life here in the same room in which his friend, Arthur Einstein, investment broker, met death a few months ago, it was learned last night.

TWO MOBBED AFTER AUTO RUNS INTO CHILDREN

Police Say Steel Workers Admit Using Liquor to 'Celebrate Their Day Off'

Coroner W. J. McGregor today was to question Frank Kubiszewski, 30, and Frank Novak, 31, both of 28 Niagara street, in connection with the automobile accident in which a child was killed, and four were injured late yesterday.

Police said that the men, who are steel workers, told them they "had a day off," and that they got some moonshine to celebrate, using the car Kubiszedski was driving.

At 26 Lawn street, police said, the automobile ran over the sidewalk where William Harris, 3, of 310 Lawn street; Robert Stock, 6, of 324 Lawn street, Regis McKnight, 5, of rear 29 Lawn street; Daniel Kelly, 2½, of 24 Lawn street, and Patrick Spalino, 4, of 46 Lawn street, were playing.

MOB MENACES AUTOISTS

The Harris child was killed instantly.

The Kelly boy and the McKnight youngster were in the Magee Hospital today, while Robert Stock was in the Montefiore Hospital and Spalino was in the Children's Hospital. All four were regarded as being in serious condition.

Neighbors said that the McKnight boy's parents were at a movie at the time of the accident, and that they knew nothing about it until they returned home and learned that their son was in the hospital.

Both men, according to the police, admitted they drove on after the accident until they were mobbed when the machine was driven into a vacant lot near their home. The Stock boy caught on the bumper of the car and was carried two blocks, police said.

REVIVE 'MIXED BABY' FEUD

CHICAGO, July 26.—(AP.)—The tiny bundle of boy at the William Watkins home has become, for the time being, the baby nobody wants.

The William Watkinses don't want him neither do the Charles Bambergers. All the parents want the baby boy the Bambergers now have.

The baby nobody wants was born in the Englewood Hospital 36 days ago, the son either of the Watkinses or the Bambergers. He and the other baby boy left the hospital the same day—the former to the Watkins home, the other to the home of the Bambergers. Everyone was happy.

FOUND TABS SWITCHED

Then Father Watkins found a tab marked Bamberger on the back of the baby he and his wife had. A tab marked Watkins was found on the back of the baby at the Bamberger home. Confusion, anxiety and heart-twists followed. The Watkinses wanted the baby

Mellon Buys Virginia Estate for Daughter

WASHINGTON, July 26—(INS.)—"Oak Hill," an historic Virginia estate about three miles from Leesburg, has been purchased by Andrew W. Mellon. It is understood Mellon bought the property for his daugnter, Mrs. David K. Estes Bruce, who has been in declining health.

The estate comprises 1,200 acres and the dwelling is of brick construction and colonial design. President Monroe was among those who first occupied the house. Frank C. Littleton was its last owner. It is reported he received about $700,000.

Policeman Shoots Suspect in Pursuit

Shot while fleeing arrest, Evan Thomas, 18, 314 Cherry street, West Homestead, was in Homestead Hospital today with a bullet wound in the left leg. With two companions he was discovered stripping an automobile in Sarah street, Homestead, at 5 a.m., police said, but fled when accosted by Patrolman Leroy Jones.

Jones fired several shots in the air before firing at the fugitive and wounding Thomas, the Homestead police reported. Police later arrested Jack Horgan, 19, and Charles Awenowitz, 18, both of West Homestead.

ANTI-DRYS ASK VARE'S HELP

PHILADELPHIA, July 26.—(AP.)—In an effort to get William S. Vare behind a movement for the election of an anti-dry ticket in November, B. Dawson Coleman, acting chairman of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, and John H. Mason, banker and friend of Vare, called at the latter's office yesterday.

Neither Coleman nor Mason would say that the Liberal party ticket which they have preempted, would name John M. Hemphill, Democrat, as its candidate for governor. Coleman said:

"We called on Mr. Vare to ask him to give the anti-dry cause all the support he can muster. We told him we knew his sentiments were with this cause. We discussed the entire political situation, but nothing definite was agreed upon.

"We are shortly going to Pittsburgh to talk with W. L. Mellon and the other western political leaders and see if we cannot obtain their support."

Vacations Restore Vigor, Says Coolidge

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., July 26.

To the Editor of the Sun-Telegraph:

The vacation season has come again. Rightly used it restores the vigor of mind and body by change and relaxation. We cannot always dwell on the heights. We cannot always be at our best. If we are to do work of the highest excellence our periods of high activity must be followed by periods of rest. Some firms where the pressure is very great require their members to take two or three months' vacation.

CALVIN COOLIDGE

A great wealth of out of doors awaits those who seek it. The long stretches of shore by sea and lake, the woods and hills of our northern states, all have a variety of scene and charm which the world cannot surpass.

But many of us would pass by the great scenic beauties, the natural wonders of the nation, or the fashionable watering places, to revisit the quiet, secluded and humbler regions of our childhood home. It may be changed now. The old familiar forms may be gone. But memory remains. The love of a mother and a father dwelt there. From that shrine we return always bringing with us a renewal of the strength of the hills or the plains and the inspiration to a nobler purpose.

CALVIN COOLIDGE.

ROLAND GARROS STADIUM, Auteuil, France, July 26.—(AP.)—The French team of Henri Cochet and Jacques Brugnon won the first set at 6-3 from Johnny Van Ryn and Wilmer Allison, young Americans, in their doubles match in the Davis Cup challenge round here today.

Allison, erratic in the first set, improved as the match wore on, and the second set produced some very brilliant tennis. The Frenchman won the second set, 7-5, and led two sets to none.

Allison and Van Ryn won the third set, 6-1, and trailed two sets to one.

President Doumergue, of France, arrived at the stadium during the preliminaries. He stood before the Davis Cup, placed on a pedestal near one end of the courts, and shook hands with the members of both teams, who lined up before the cup.

The crowd was somewhat smaller than the capacity attendance of 10,000 yesterday.

The match was considered by the French the turning point of the series and the victors the odds-on favorites to win the historic trophy.

In the singles yesterday Bill Tilden defeated Jean Borotra, 2-6, 7-5, 6-4, 7-5, and Cochet defeated George Lott, 6-4, 6-2, 6-2.

OFFICER SHOT, MAN HELD

Patrolman Thomas M. Kornbauer, 33, reporting at the East [illegible] Station, was in South Side Hospital today with three bullets in his body, fired, police said, by Charles Cytrych, 24, of 1918 Larkins way, shortly after midnight, as a result of an argument some hours earlier.

Cytrych was arrested several hours after the shooting at 2521 Mission street by South Side police. At a hearing later he was held over to await the outcome of Kornbauer's injuries. He testified he had been drinking with Kornbauer, but remembered nothing about the shooting.

Kornbauer, who went on vacation four days ago, was sitting on the front steps of his home at 1906 Larkins way shortly after midnight with John Ramos, of 1919 Larkins way, when Cytrych is alleged to have approached them and fired five shots at the policeman.

The injured man told police at the hospital that he spent yesterday afternoon in company with Cytrych and Ramos, and that Cytrych became offended during an argument.

Andrew Kalinda, of 1910 Larkins way, told Homicide Detectives Frank Morgan and John Riley he was passing at the time of the shooting, and heard one of the men, presumably Cytrych, say:

Aged Princess Wins Right To Wed Corey Suitor

PARIS, July 26.—(AP.)—Princess Amedee de Broglie, 73 temporarily has won the right to marry Don Luis de Bourbon, 42, disowned cousin to King Alfonso of Spain and son of the Infanta Eulalia, engaged a few months ago to Mabelle Gilman Corey, of Pittsburgh.

The Tribunal of the Seine today decided that the princess' nephew, the Duke de Brassac, had no right under French law to seek to prevent the marriage. The right to bring such a suit, the court held, belongs only to ancestral relatives but not to descendants.

Before finally deciding, however, whether a guardian should be appointed for the aged princess, as asked by her family represented through the duke, the court appointed three physicians to make a thorough examination of the defendant.

Meanwhile the administration appointed by the court July 7 is to remain in charge of the business affairs of the princess.

Her lawyer, Henri Torres, had raised the point that French law does not recognize the right of descendants to act in family matters, and had pleaded for his client to be granted the same right that is possessed by others, namely to seek happiness wherever she sees it, no matter what her age.

Maitre Ausepin, who defended the family interests, had pleaded that the princess was mentally unsound.

The princess, in a statement read by her attorney, declared:

"I want to spend a few happy years before I die."

ITALIANS FIGHT DISEASE, STARVATION IN QUAKE ZONE

GOVERNMENT RUSHES RELIEF

Sufferers' Property May Be Exempted From Tax 10 Yrs.; King Cheers Victims

By GUGLIELMO EMANUEL.
International News Service.

ROME, July 26.—Grimly determined inhabitants and relief workers of the earthquake devastated region in South Central Italy, blanching occasionally as new minor oscillations shuddered the ground and tumbled weakened structures into the dust, joined forces today in a superhuman battle against starvation and disease.

Heartened by the presence of King Victor Emmanuel and the government's overwhelming progress in its efforts to bring order out of chaos, the nerve-shaken population of the ravaged communities quietly accepted its food and water rations and rolled up its sleeves to work side by side with the army of relief.

Feverish brows were wiped long enough to extend welcome to his [illegible] a short little figure in [illegible]niform. His tour through [illegible]ulsed zone inspired new [illegible]e, and for the first time [illegible] tragedy hundreds of the sufferers momentarily lifted their curtain of sorrow to survey the damage with an appraising eye. Many conjectured on the early reconstruction of their homes and firesides.

RELIEF FUNDS GIVEN

Quick to sense this note of encouragement pulsating through the afflicted territory, Premier Benito Mussolini's ministry made all efforts to foster a new courage where it is needed most. First it was announced the government had contributed $1,200,000 for initial relief work, and the Bank of Italy $26,000.

On the heis of this goodwill message followed recurrent and unofficial reports that the Italian government had already reached a decision to push wholesale reconstruction of the twisted area as well as that of the cyclone-stricken Piave with even greater speed than the sweeping reconstruction program which followed the war.

On top of this cheering even to demoralized victims of the smitten land, was circulated the unofficial report that all earthquake sufferers would be declared exempt from taxation for the next 10 years, or at least from the payment of taxes on tangible property. The sum total of these reports, added to the visible efforts by thousands of government relief workers spread all through the south central section, improved the morale of the population immensely.

Picks, shovels and crowbars of the rescue squads had about completed their gruesome task today, with most of those killed extricated from the ruins and buried. The huge task of caring for the injured and appeasing the hunger and thirst of survivors went on at a pace amazing even to the most casual observer.

GUARD AGAINST DISEASE

Augmented by government trucks, army lorries and vehicles of [illegible]cription, these cavalc[illegible]bor fought their way [illegible]is-choked roads high [illegible]e Apenines to bring [illegible]ousands still camped out in fields, shielded by tents and in many cases inadequate clothing in place of homes which were tumbled to dust when seven earthquakes leveled five provinces, a total of 7,500 square miles.

Mobilizing its entire resources and thankfully declining foreign aid, the Mussolini government launched manfully into the task of averting hunger and epidemic in the stricken areas by guarding the health and welfare of the survivors as much as possible under the circumstances. Tons of bread, biscuits, spaghetti, clothing, blankets, water and medical supplies were transported to the needy places and distributed. Doctors by the scores rushed about to administer to the ailing, and troops [illegible]ard to see that no looting [illegible]ice occurred.

Spirito Chiapetta, special [illegible] Pope Pius XI, arrived in the earthquake area today and placed the full resources of the church at the command of the relief workers. He is under instructions to make an exhaustive report to the Pontiff on the loss of life and property damage.

The latest of the few official government estimates on the number of dead gave the figure of 2,142, but other semi-official reports place the death toll in the vicinity of 3,000, with 2,176 killed in the province of Avellino alone and 4,551 injured.

'MIXED BABIES' FEUD REVIVED

at the Bamberger home; the Bambergers wanted him, too, and they kept him.

Thursday evening, seven scientists and medical men, summoned by Dr. Arnold H. Kegel, health commissioner, agreed with one exception that the babies should be switched—the one at the Watkins home going to the Bambergers, and vice versa. But the Bambergers refused to abide by the decision and temporarily disappeared.

Then with yesterday's dawn came an announcement that at a midnight conference in the Keystone Hospital, the parents met and reached a decision to keep the babies they had from the first.

AGREEMENT REPUDIATED

Another group of physicians and hospital authorities, meeting with the parents and Dr Kegel, had decided the tabs had been switched in the hospital.

The Watkinses repudiated this announcement today. Watkins said:

"I allowed myself to be talked into being satisfied that the baby I have is mine. But today I don't know. I have hired a lawyer and I guess I'll get out a a writ or something."

The Watkins attorney, Barratt O'Hara, said every legal resource would be used to get the right baby into the right home.

Bamberger was more hostile. He declared:

"Listen, the baby I've got now is going to stay right in this house. I've got a lawyer, too, and I know my own rights—and I know my own son. See?"

DRIVER GRILLED IN BOY'S DEATH

John Whalen arrived at the Kubiszewski home as the crowd tried to attack the two men, according to their report. Sidney Taxay, of 53 Lawn street, a witness of the accident, told police he boarded the car and hung on until it reached the Kubiszewski home.

MOTHER, DAUGHTER HURT

Mrs. Hilda Grumbling, 32, of 619 Clearview avenue, and her daughter, Betsy Jane, were slightly hurt when their car collided with a machine operated by T. W. Hobson, of 1636 Grandview avenue, in the Noblestown road, late yesterday.

Stanley Walas, 13, of 2411 James street, and Teddy Petchuck, 10, of 2419½ Sarah street, were recovering in the South Side Hospital from injuries received when they were knocked from a street car on the Twenty-second Street Bridge, while stealing a ride, police said. Frank Sosnowski, 12, of 2100 Jane street, riding with them, was slightly hurt.

When he ran in front of a machine driven by C. H. Schofield, 32, of 277 Dawson street, according to a police report, Albert Griffin, 10, of Dawson street, was slightly hurt. He was taken home.

Unable to stop his machine, police said, Edward Snyder, of 410 Fairywood street, crashed into the car of Howard Kessler, of 135 Amelia street, McKees Rocks, which in turn struck the rear of a wagon driven by Louis Gordon, 20, of 352 Craft avenue, in West Carson street.

Snyder, Gordon and Victor Larkin, 29, of 2805 West Carson street, a passenger in Snyder's car, were taken to the Ohio Valley Hospital, where their conditions were regarded as "good."

Last Cutten Robber Gives Up, Hunt Ends

WHEATON, Ill., July 26.—(INS.)—Arthur W. Cutten's eight-year search for the band of robbers who looted his home of $20,000 in jewelry after locking the multi-millionaire in a vault, was at an end today with the capture of the ninth and last member of the gang accused of the robbery.

Caspar Rosenberg, the last member, surrendered at the state's attorney's office late yesterday.

"I have been hunted for eight years," Rosenberg said, "and am prepared to prove my innocence."

Earthquake Rocks German Village

DUISBURG, Germany, July 26.—(INS.)—Residents of Altstaden, a suburb of Duisburg, were thrown into a panic today by an earth tremor which hurled pictures from walls and plates from shelves in scores of homes.

No damage was reported and there were no injuries. Many residents fled into the streets when their homes shook. With Italy's disaster fresh in mind, fears were felt that Germany might be visited by a similar catastrophe.

No further tremors followed, however.

Ambridge Man With Gun and Knife Fined

Joseph Marano, 26, Eleventh street, Ambridge, was sentenced to 60 days in the workhouse or $100 fine by Magistrate Ray Schneider in North Side Police Court today. When arrested early Friday morning Marano had an automatic pistol, a quantity of ammunition and a large knife. He was loitering near the North Side Garage, 104 West North avenue.

Woman Dug From Ruins of Quake After 3 Days

ROME, July 26.—(INS.)—Rescue squads in the earthquake-demolished town of Lacedonia received an ovation from haggard survivors of the catastrophe today when they succeeded in extracting from a pile of ruins a woman whose voice had been heard beneath for the past three days. She was uninjured. A girl at Aquelonia was similarly rescued.

NEW HEAT WAVE GRIPS WEST

CHICAGO, July 26.—(INS.)—Another siege of blistering heat lay across the Central states today, with weather forecasters refusing to hold any hope of immediate relief.

Three deaths marked the steady rise in temperature here yesterday. All three victims suffered heat prostrations, and died soon afterward. While the mercury mounted to the 96-degree level here, readings of 100 were frequent in other Midwest communities.

OLD INCOME TAX RATE MAY BE RESTORED

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON.
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, July 26.—The old federal income tax rates, which were slashed $160,000,000 last December, will be restored next fall, administration leaders admitted today, unless there is a decided boom in American business conditions during the late summer and early fall.

Restoration of the old rates will take effect without congressional action, since the tax slash was a temporary one and affected only 1929 incomes, payable this year. It would require an act of Congress to continue the reduced rates another year, and administration leaders will oppose this move unless prosperity returns.

Several factors will prevent continuation of the reduced taxes, with increased federal expenditures vying with reduced revenues as the principal cause.

SHARP INCREASE

In the last fiscal year, ending July 1, the federal government's ordinary expenditures totaled $4,177,941,000. This was a sharp increase over the preceding 12 months. On top of this, President Hoover expects ordinary expenditures to exceed $4,200,000,000 during the current fiscal year.

The President's estimate may prove far too small, since Congress appropriated close to $5,000,000,000 during the last session, principally for expenditure in the 12 months ending next July 1. Some of these appropriations will not be spent at once, but the bulk was appropriated for the current year.

To match this increased cost of government, federal revenues will have to increase sharply or the government may face a deficit at the end of the current year.

FEARS DEFICIT

Secretary of the Treasury Mellon recently announced he feared a deficit of $100,000,000 at the end of the fiscal year, due to the extraordinary expenditures on federal projects, such as river and harbor improvements, good roads and federal buildings.

The Progressive bloc in the Senate meanwhile will fight any lowering of federal taxes.

Some of their members voted against the slash last December and proposed to spend the surplus then in the treasury on aiding agriculture. Since then the Federal Farm Board had been given $500,000,000 for farm relief, of which probably $75,000,000 has been expended.

The tax slash, which benefited taxpayers during the present year, included $70,000,000 for individual incomes and $90,000,000 on corporations. If the slashed taxes are not continued, next year individuals will pay the old rates of 1½ per cent on the first $4,000, 3 per cent on the second $4,000 and 5 per cent on the balance, while the corporation tax will revert to 12 per cent on all incomes for 1930.

HOPE FOR PROSPERITY

Administration leaders meanwhile hope for greater federal revenues this fall due to a recurrence of business prosperity.

They also hope for greater revenues under the new tariff bill, believing that importing will be considerably increased by fall, even at the higher rates.

WILKINSBURG VOTE CHARGE HELD FALSE

Pinchot Inquirers Declare 'Marks' Not Intended for Any But Innocent Purpose

The recount board checking alleged fraud in the recent primary election made a report of the ballots cast in the Fifth District of the Third Ward of Wilkinsburg "in bad faith" and the report "is false in point of fact and misleading in intent," according to a formal statement by Attorney Ralph Frank and Maj. W. T. Rees, representing Gifford Pinchot before the board. They declared:

"Our conclusion is that for some reason, which has not yet been explained, the recount board lent itself to an attempt to cast reflection upon the election practices and the people of Wilkinsburg."

Under an agreement, Pinchot's agents were to be permitted to examine each ballot box after it had been checked by the recount board.

MARKINGS DENIED

Inferentially, the board was to file with the prothonotary its reports of checked ballot boxes in the order they were examined by Frank and Rees.

They charge the Wilkinsburg box report was filed last July 21, that it had not been examined by the Pinchot representatives and that there were, on that day, 23 boxes from Pittsburgh election districts available for filing. One of the latter, still not reported, "was the worst" Frank and Rees have seen, they said.

The board called attention in its report of the Wilkinsburg box to ink dots after the names of various candidates for major offices and to the fact that there were seven unregistered voters on the list of names who had cast ballots.

Frank and Rees declared the ink dots reported by the board in many cases did not exist. Those that were apparent were exactly like marks which appeared on scores of ballots in the Second and Sixth wards that were passed by the recount board without question or comment. They said:

"INNOCENT EXPLANATION"

Regarding the names of unregistered voters on the numbered list, three voted on age and affidavits to that effect could have been found by the recount board, they said. The other four had all the necessary qualifications to register and vote, Frank and Rees said, claiming the voters had lived in the district for the required legal time, had been assessed and paid taxes. Frank and Rees concluded:

"The Wilkinsburg election board in the circumstances refused to disfranchise them on account of the failure of the register-assessor of that district to include their names on the list which she had sent to the County Commissioners' office."

Sweeney said:

"Well, I will postpone the hearing until Monday morning."

Afterward Sweeney said to a Sun-Telegraph reporter:

"You know what is going on here."

Foster said:

"We had our case ready. The magistrate gave no good reason for postponing the hearing."

GOSLIN'S BOAST

Goslin several days ago said to a reporter:

"Freddy Dengler (Republican chairman of the Sixteenth Ward) and Fred Sacher (chairman of the Twenty-ninth Ward) are behind me, and I don't have to worry about McArdle (police inspector)."

Goslin and the two other defendants are at liberty under $2,500 bail each, the high bond being in accordance with a request by District Attorney A. T. Park in all racket cases.

DISCHARGES SUSPECT

Magistrate Sweeney discharged Stanley Smith, said to be a Goslin number writer, who was arrested yesterday at 22 South Twenty-Seventh street.

A 13-year-old girl testified she was in Smith's place to place six cents for a neighbor woman and 20 cents for her mother at the time the police entered. She was unable to give the name of the neighbor.

Sweeney said:

"You go out and bring in that woman."

In half an hour she had not returned. Sweeney said he did not believe the girl's story, intimating that the girl was only a "plant" by police to trap Smith. He then ordered the case discharged.

FORD POLICY HELD AID TO REDS

Call for Unneeded Labor and Contract With Russians Cited at U. S. Inquiry

DETROIT, July 26.—(AP.)—The congressional committee, which yesterday heard Henry Ford charged with unwittingly aiding the Communist cause, expected to conclude its investigation of Communistic activities in Detroit and Michigan today.

Of 11 witnesses heard by the committee yesterday, only Father Charles E. Coughlin voiced serious apprehension over alleged Soviet efforts to spread its doctrines in the United States.

It was he who made reference to Mr. Ford, and told of an influx of workmen from the South a year ago in response, he said, to a statement from Ford that 30,000 men were needed at his plant here.

"NO JOBS"

There were no jobs for them, he said, and a fire hose was turned on them when they gathered in front of the plant. Such incidents, he said, tend to turn the working men to Communism. He also criticized a $13,000,000 contract he said the Ford company had signed with Russia, as an aid to Bolshevism.

Police Commissioner Thomas C. Wilcox, who was Department of Justice agent here until two months ago, told of his activities here against Communists in 1920, when 827 persons were arrested and 234 deported.

He said a law was needed to curb activities of Communists.

Charles T. Winegar, personnel director for the Chrysler Corporation and commissioner of public safety for Hamtramck, a suburb, with a large foreign population, expressed the same view, although he said he knew only one bona fide Communist.

BLAME UNEMPLOYMENT

Estimates of the number of Communists in Detroit varied from 1,500 to 5,000. All witnesses were agreed that unemployment tends to encourage such movements.

Hamilton Fish, Jr., representative in Congress from New York, is chairman of the committee, which has as other members Representatives John Nelson, Maine; Carl G. Bachman, West Virginia; Edward E. Eslick, Tennessee, and Robert S. Hall, Mississippi.

SOVIET PAPER ATTACKS U. S.

MOSCOW, July 26.—(AP.)—Izvestia, organ of the Soviet government, today editorially accuses the United States government of having interfered with internal affairs of the Soviet union through the Fish congressional commission.

The newspaper charges the commission with violation of the elementary requirements of international law.

Izvestia is particularly bitter over the form of questions asked of Peter Bogdanoff, chairman of the board of Amtorg Trading Corporation, especially those relating to Amtorg's alleged political activities and aims of the Communist International in the United States and the actions of certain Russians.

The newspaper also challenges the questioning seeking to fix connection of Amtorg officers with the secret police.

Izvestia characterizes the commission's questions to Soviet witnesses as "seditious, indecent, impudent, absurd and ignorant."

He was taken to Pittsburgh Hospital.

LONDON, July 26.—One of the season's special features was the premier of Marion Davies' latest moving picture, "The Gay Nineties," known in America as "The Floradora Girl," at the Empire Theater last night.

Before a crowded, distinguished and constantly applauding audience, Miss Davies made a personal appearance. In a brief speech she said she would carry back to Hollywood with her warmest memories of the reception given by her English friends.

Prior to her performance, Miss Davies was the guest of Lord and Lady Louis Mountbatten.

Among the prominent persons in the audience were Lady Ravensdale, the Countess of Oxford and Asquith, Lady Colefax, H. G. Wells, Edward Noblock, Irene Castle, Anthony Asquith and Elinor Glyn.

At the conclusion of the performance a private reception was given in honor of Miss Davies at the West End Hotel.

The actor suddenly abandoned his plan to fight the battery charge preferred by the dancer and pleaded guilty.

In demanding a jury trial after charges had been placed against him, Lease said the blow to the Duncan eye was merely a counter struck in self-defense.

Her version of the affair was that Lease struck her in the early morning hours of July 6, when he refused to give her the keys to her car and she reproved his advances.

PARDON CASE SCHEDULED TUESDAY

Letters of Fanatics Lead To Caution; Cleveland Man's Story Discredited

Universal Service.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 26.—When the State Supreme Court hearing on the new pardon application of Warren K. Billings opens next Tuesday elaborate precautions to prevent possible interruption will be enforced.

A special squad of state police will form a cordon about the courtroom doors in the State Building. Other guards will be stationed within the chambers.

FANATICS WRITE

Letters from fanatics to the court, as well as applications for admission from hundreds of persons who cannot be accommodated in the 100 seats available, have made this step necessary, it was revealed today by Chief Justice William H. Waste.

Meanwhile a new witness bobbed up in Cleveland with a story involving three unnamed Mexicans in the Preparedness Day bomb outrage. He is Adam Krumesc, caretaker on the estate of an Ohio millionaire. Little credence was given his story by defense attorneys here, and the State Supreme Court will not invite him to testify at the present hearing. Judge Waste said:

"We are interested in the story of this man. If it should develop later that the attorneys for Billings or Mooney attach weight to his story, and request that he be heard, the matter will be considered."

STORY TOLD BEFORE

"In my opinion it is 100 per cent bunk. The story that three Mexicans were seen loitering near Steuart and Market streets at the time of the explosion was a favorite one at the time of the trials. All the cranks and publicity seekers came forward with the same yarn. It rose through the publication of one man's story, afterwards discredited."

OFF TO PARIS AND GRAVES IN FRANCE

By CHARLES A. EARLEY,
Staff Correspondent.

NEW YORK, July 26.—Nearly two score half-merry, half-sad Pittsburgh and Allegheny County women sailed from Hoboken pier today on a final journey of love and tribute to shrines of their soldier dead in France.

They were Gold Star mothers and widows, whose sons or husbands gave their lives on French soil in the World War.

To all the voyage is a fulfillment of a hope cherished since they received the news that their loved ones would not return.

12 YEARS AGO

Twelve years ago their boys started on a journey from the same point of embarkation. But that sailing was different. It was screened by the darkness of night, with each movement surrounded by deepest secrecy.

Today's departure was different. Whistles blew, bells rang, echoes of bon voyage resounded from bow to stern on the liner Republic, and sirens screamed.

New York officers of the Eightieth Division, headed by Capt. Raoul Elton and the Rev. Edward A. Wallace, came aboard and gave each mother their best wishes for the pilgrimage. Each member of the Allegheny contingent received a gift basket of fruits and sweets as a token from the surviving comrades of their boys. The baskets were distributed just before the liner steamed down the North River for the open sea.

ESCORTS ASSIGNED

Army officers and nurse escorts of previous groups to the cemeteries and battlefields have been assigned to care for the wants of today's voyagers.

Up to the hour of sailing, each member of the party had stood the trip remarkably well.

Maj. J. H. Ashcraft, medical officer in charge, said the Pittsburgh mothers appeared to be in the best of health and showed more spirit than any he had encountered.

WILL GO TO PARIS

Until the ship reaches Cherbourg, approximately seven days hence, the travelers' time will be their own. On arrival all will be taken to Paris, where headquarters will be maintained prior to the cemeteries and battlefields pilgrimage. A tentative schedule calls for visits to points of interest in the French capital.

The trip to the soldier graves will be made by motor bus. Trained guides will escort the mothers to the graves of their sons.

July 30 a smaller contingent is scheduled to sail from Hoboken on the America. Others will leave in August. The pilgrimages are being made under auspices of the War Department. Aside from mothers, only soldiers' widows who have not remarried are permitted the tour.

EX-WIFE FIGHTS 'HOBO'S' WILL

LOS ANGELES, July 26.—(AP.)—Mrs. Ineborg Sorenson How has announced she will contest the will of James Eads How, "millionaire hobo," who was her former husband, on the ground his stepson, Holger How, is entitled to most of the large estate. How, who died several days ago at Staunton, Va., left the 13-year-old boy $5.

Mrs. How said her son by a prior marriage was adopted legally by How in 1925 "for the sole purpose of making him the heir." The greater part of How's estate was left to the "workers of the world."

Mrs. How revealed she cannot share in the estate because a final divorce decree was granted her eight days before How's death. In his will How directed his former wife receive such an amount as the law provided.

GUARD INJURED BLAST SUSPECT

BARNESBORO, Pa., July 26.—(AP.)—Perry Langham, 54, accused of killing his two children in a dynamite explosion at his home early Wednesday, remained under guard at the Spangler Hospital today, suffering from apparently self-inflicted knife wounds.

If Langham recovers he will be arraigned on charges of causing the deaths of the children, Arthur, 14 months, and La Rue, 6 years.

Police said Langham apparently had tried to commit suicide just prior to his capture near Hillsdale, Indiana County. He was being watched closely with the thought he might make another attempt at self-destruction.

END OF MERGER SUIT FAR OFF

YOUNGSTOWN, O., July 26.—(Universal.)—The Youngstown Sheet and Tube-Bethlehem Steel merger trial will last at least another month, attorneys predicted as the hearing adjourned until Monday.

Testimony of Nathan A. Kaercher, Youngstown, that W. J. Morris, Sheet and Tube treasurer, paid him $2.50 a share for proxies on 1,400 shares of the company's stock, featured yesterday's hearing. This was in addition to buying outright 1,000 shares at $150, Kaercher said.

Attorneys for Cyrus S. Eaton Monday will continue their attack on legality of thousands of shares of stock voted for the merger at the Sheet and Tube stockholders meeting April 8, at which it was announced the merger was approved by a majority of 58,000 shares.

Votes on 26,000 shares held by the Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada were attacked, Eaton attorneys saying Ohio and Canadian law and the firm's by-laws were violated.

AIR RACE HEADS FOR ARIZONA

SAN ANGELO, Tex., July 26.—(AP.)—With Lieut. Lee Gehlbach, of Little Rock, leading the flight by nearly two hours over his closest rival, 13 planes were groomed today for an early takeoff for the Douglas, Ariz., leg of the all-America air derby's jaunt about the United States.

Gehlbach's unofficial elapsed time since the derby began at Detroit Monday, was 17:38:07. Stub Quinby, of Moline, Ill., is second, with nearly two hours more than Quinby, of Moline, Ill., is second.

The derby strength was increased to 13 last night by the appearance of H. W. Holladay, Los Angeles, who was delayed at Roosevelt Field, N. Y., when his ship nosed into the ground, breaking the propeller.

Stanley Stanton, Wichita, Kan., pilot arrived here with his plane soaked with gasoline and his feet blistered. Just as he left Houston, Stanton discovered a leak in his gasoline tank. Rather than spend hours repairing it, Stanton took off with the fuel pouring into the cockpit. He reached San Angelo just as his gasoline was exhausted.

FISH HOOK MAY COST INCE LIFE

LOS ANGELES, July 26.—(INS.)—Deep concern was felt in the motion picture colony today for Ralph Ince, motion picture actor and director, who was operated on late yesterday for the removal of a three-inch fishhook from the back of his skull.

Physicians found it necessary to cut into the skull itself to remove the heavy barb. A bulletin issued early today at Hollywood Community Hospital said the director was still in serious condition.

Ince, with a party of other motion picture notables, went deep sea fishing yesterday 18 miles off shore. Several lines, including that of Ince, became entangled in a bed of kelp. A jerk of his line brought Ince's hook from the water and imbedded it in his scalp.

The hook could not be removed until Ince was taken to the hospital and the operation performed.

Seventeen guests accompanied President and Mrs. Hoover to camp, including Howard Heinz, of Pittsburgh, a member of the food administration during the war and an old friend of the President.

Lady Heath Incompetent, Says Guardian Applicant

CLEVELAND, July 26.—(AP.)—Lady Mary Heath, celebrated Irish aviatrix, who was seriously injured in an airplane crash here 11 months ago, is alleged to be "incompetent by reason of mental disorders" in an application for appointment as her guardian, filed in probate court by her nurse and companion, Miss Florence Madden.

The application revealed Lady Mary entered the Delhurst Sanitarium at Mentor Thursday for treatment. Members of the sanitarium staff said she was suffering chiefly from a nervous condition.

Lady Mary suffered a fractured skull when her plane crashed into a building while she was testing the ship to enter the national air races. An unusually delicate operation saved her life.

The guardianship application declares she is unable properly to take care of herself and her property, consisting of a trust fund from which she receives an annual income of $3,500.

Since her release from a hospital here last October, Lady Mary and Miss Madden have been living together, part of the time in Reno, Nev., where Lady Mary obtained a divorce from her 76-year-old husband, Sir James Heath.

Later, Lady Mary returned to Cleveland, made numerous public appearances, and indicated her health was good.

MISSION SUIT DISMISSED

A suit to annul the charter of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society of the Methodist Protestant Church was dismissed today in Common Pleas Court by Judge Frank P. Patterson.

The suit was brought by three members of the society—Lydia K. East, treasurer, Florence B. Sturgeon and Martha A. Millar—after a ruling in 1928 by the Methodist Protestant national body which provided that all such work should be governed by a board of missions. Surrender of the local charter was asked.

Members of the society voted against the plan by a large majority. The General Conference of the church then notified the local society to send dues to it. Some did. Most refused because it would have interfered with annuities being paid here. In dismissing the suit Judge Patterson said:

"In this unseemly dispute we deem it proper to call attention to the outstanding rights of the annuitants."

Real Estate

Since the craze for minature golf is sweeping the country, real estate men are beginning to realize that a lot of valuable space is going to waste on the roofs of big city skyscrapers. The owners of these buildings do not seem to have grasped the opportunity, or at least have not been active in promoting skyscraper golf, but rank outsiders are catching the clue and it is a safe bet that before another week rolls by there will be options for Pittsburgh roofs up 15 stories or higher.

Enthusiasts for abbreviated golf point out that the top of a big office building always has a cool breeze and is easy of access at a time when the player feels the urge to take up his putter. It affords the opportunity for an after-lunch game when a little exercise helps the digestion and sometimes is the impetus that closes the impending big deal. From the standpoint of the building owner, reasonable rentals for the roof would be similar to finding money. He never dreamed of such utility for his building when he erected it, and it is argued that offices might be leased more easily when there's a golf game on the roof.

Pittsburgh may yet have the first skyscraper golf links.

For the week ending July 23, there were 375 mortgages, amounting to $1,871,487.95, placed on record in Allegheny County, according to the report of C. C. C. Stotler, secretary of the Title Guaranty Company. Of these, 36 aggregating $173,165.98 were purchase money mortgages.

Three hundred and thirty-nine mortgages amounting to $1,698,321.89, were straight mortgages and given as follows: To corporations, 135, amounting to $933,149.75; building and loan associations, 131, $461,794.38; individuals, 73, $303,377.86.

Gribben & Co., by John J. McKenna, sold for Hugh Craig to Michael Rutkowski a lot 21 by 100 feet, improved with a three-story brick business house and dwelling, at 3703 Butler street, Sixth Ward, for $12,000.

Lee G. Brimmer, a builder, has sold to Alfred Jessup for a private consideration, a new dwelling of six rooms and bath, together with a garage, in Sterling street, Ingram. The lot is 44 by 99 feet.

A. G. Pera has applied for a building permit for a brick extension to his restaurant building at 128 South Highland avenue. The estimated cost is $5,500.

PATRICIA PITT'S SPRIGHTLY COMMENT ON PITTSBURGH'S SOCIETY HAPPENINGS

Horse Show To Be Held Sept. 12-13

Autumn, with its splashes of vivid scarlet and gold and saffron, and with its crisp breezes having a tang that gives zest to folks, we're all anticipating. And this autumn with its varied events will fulfill our hopes.

One of the most popular offerings of autumn will be the annual Pittsburgh Hunt Horse Show to be held this year on September 12 and 13 in the hunt show ring, Fox Chapel district. David I. McCahill is chairman of the committee.

And I might mention that a great attraction will be the new Hunt clubhouse to be opened the latter part of next month, I understand.

And the men on the committee are J. Raymond Price, Richard King Mellon, Charles L. Flaccus, George Paull, George L. McCook, Howard Heinz, F. Le Moyne Page and George P. Gray.

No matter how diverting life at summer places may be, no matter to what new heights the mercury climbs, society folks are still mindful of their favorite philanthropies.

Holds Sale

From Gloucester, Mass., comes news that Mrs. Horace Forbes Baker, whose summer home is at Bass Rocks, Gloucester, conducted a sale recently in her home of needlework and arts and crafts work from the Women's Industrial Exchange of Pittsburgh.

Assisting Mrs. Baker in selling the works of deserving Pittsburgh women were Mrs. George B. Tener, who is summering at Eastern Point, Mass.; Mrs. James L. Stuart and her daughter, Emily, who are at Bass Rocks for the summer, too, and Mrs. Harry L. Moore and Mrs. J. G. Roney, who are at the Brynmore, Annisquam, for the summer.

Others who aided them are Mrs. Richard Ward and Mrs. Henry Taylor, who are at Swampscott, Mass., for the summer months; Mrs. T. Chittenden Hill, who is at Eastern Point; Mrs. C. B. Bowser, who is at East Gloucester; Miss Jean and Miss Irene McKinney, who are at Bass Rocks, and Mrs. Andrew Sloan.

Honor Fall Bud

Notable among such events was the dinner dance the Frank McIntoshes, of Franklin, gave last evening in the Wanango Country Club, near Franklin. And the guests of honor were Frances Kier, debutante daughter of the Frank J. Kiers, of Beechwood boulevard, and Margaret Smith, daughter of the Henry W. Smiths, of Franklin. Mrs. McIntosh is a sister of Frances' mother, I might add.

The clubhouse was decorated with roses, delphinium, snapdragons, and other colorful summer flowers. Frances wore a striking gown of black lace and Margaret Smith, biege lace. Receiving with them was the hostess, of course, who wore ivory lace and orchids. Mrs. Kier chose blue lace, and Mrs. Smith appeared in pie crust lace. All had orchids.

The Kiers are just home from Europe.

After a two-week wedding trip in Bermuda the William Dudley Livingstons are in Lawrence, L. I., visiting Mr Livingston's parents, the John Griswold Livingstons. They will return to Sewickley next week and will live in Orchard lane. You'll recall that the bride was formerly Jane Edson, daughter of Mrs. John Joy Edson, Jr., of Sewickley, before her marriage on July 5.

Travel Chatter

Tuesday will see the departure of the Ralph W. Harbisons, of Pine road, Sewickley, for Toronto, Canada, by motor. They will stay in the North for a week. Later they plan to go to their cottage at the Lake Placid, N. Y.

The James Millikens and their daughter, Peggy, who have been the guests of the junior James Barlow Cullums, of Broad street, Sewickley, are leaving early in August for Phillipsburg, Pa., and later in the fall they will go to New York.

Miss Mary Crossan Chaplin, of Henry avenue, is spending a week in Gotham, and Mrs. Estep T. Gott, of Sewickley, and her daughter, Pinkney Gott, returned to Sewickley this week from a visit to West River, Md., Washington and the Gibson Island Fishing Club.

This afternoon Mrs. Howard Irwin Miller, of Lloyd avenue, Edgewood, and Mrs. Carl M. Demling, of Oakland avenue, are joint hostesses at a charmingly appointed luncheon in the Miller home. The affair is being given in honor of their niece, Mrs. David Paul Ryan, the former Miss Thelma LaRue Chase, a recent bride. Covers are laid for 20 guests, and the color scheme is yellow and blue, the bridal colors. Yellow snapdragons, blue delphinium and sprays of fern center the long table. Dainty baskets tied with malline are the favors. Cards are a feature of the afternoon. Mrs. Ryan is the granddaughter of Mrs. George Blass Hultz, of Tabor street.

Kisses Scorned, Bride Granted Divorce

CHICAGO, July 26.—(INS.)—Margaret Quan Coyne, prominent Chicago society girl, was in possession of a divorce decree today from Philip Coyne, of Wilmington, Del., after testifying her kisses were spurned on their wedding day.

The suit was not contested and a cash settlement was reported made for an unnamed sum.

They were married January 20 and separated March 15. Coyne, son of William Coyne, vice president of the Du Pont de Nemours Company, resisted his bride's attempts to kiss him during that time, Mrs. Coyne testified.

BULGER CHURCH BURNS, 3 HURT

BULGER, Pa., July 26.—For the second time within two years fire early today destroyed St. Anne's Catholic Church here, and spread to the rectory of the Rev. Casimir Kosciz, next door. Lack of water supply hampered firemen from Burgettstown, Midway, McDonald and Oakdale, who were called by Bulger volunteers when the flames got beyond their control.

Father Kosciz was burned slightly while attempting to carry the Blessed Sacrament to safety, and two firemen were burned when showered by timbers as the roof caved in.

The church, destroyed by fire two years ago, was rebuilt last year. Three months ago it was discovered on fire, but the flames were extinguished with slight loss.

Passing motorists shortly after midnight discovered the building, a large frame structure, in flames, and spread the alarm. While firemen were searching for cisterns from which to pump water the flames spread to the rectory, which was damaged seriously.

100 Oregon Students Studying in Hawaii

HONOLULU, July 26.—Special attention to Pacific questions will be given by students of the University of Oregon "invading" Hawaii this summer on a unique trip. The Oregonians, numbering more than 100, arrived July 1 for six weeks of study in the islands, the University of Oregon having evolved a plan whereby a considerable section of its students was transferred bodily from Eugene to Honolulu for the summer.

Courses given on this "travel trip" include economics and sociology, journalism, political science, geology and botany.

HOOVER TO PUSH LEAGUE COURT

By FRASER EDWARDS, Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, July 26.—President Hoover contemplates calling a special session of the Senate next spring to jam through the League Court just as he did the London naval treaty.

Such was the understanding in well-informed quarters today, as it appeared that the President intends to subordinate domestic policies to his international program.

The success of the President's venture in forcing the Senate to ratify the London treaty after denying it the secret documents connected with its negotiation has given rise to the suggestion for a special League Court session.

Although it is understood the President has given serious consideration to sending to the Senate next December the League Court with the Hurst-Root formula, which strips it of the safeguarding Senate reservations, his political counsellors have advised against it.

The December session must adjourn by constitutional limitation on March 4 next, and in those three months it would be difficult to get through the annual appropriation bills, much less any general legislation, if the League Court was injected.

Under ordinary conditions, the Senate would take a month recess next March, and the President has been informed by internationalist supporters that it would be an ideal time to shove the League Court into the breach.

Not only would the President be able to exert the great pressure that he did during the recent treaty fight, it is argued, but the League Court would be out of the way when the regular session came along, the following December.

'Miss Turkey' Stirs Furor by Reducing

ISTANBUL, Turkey, July 26.—(AP.)—Miss Turkey, otherwise Mubedjil Hanim, who is to appear in a beauty contest in Rio Janeiro, conceives it to be her patriotic duty to get thin, and has stirred up the doctors of the city.

They petitioned the government to forbid reduction treatment without supervision by doctors. But Miss Turkey, with the aid of two young women physical instructors, has reduced from 156 pounds to 123.

Postmaster's Job Spurned by All, Office Shuts

WASHINGTON, Pa., July 26.—The postoffice at Fordyce will be discontinued July 31, according to an order received here from the Postoffice Department. Discontinuance of the office was ordered when none of its patrons was willing to accept the appointment of postmaster, following resignation of the present holder of that office.

The community will be served from Waynesburg.

NEW MODE DISTINGUISHED BY ELEGANT SIMPLICITY

Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, JULY 26.—The sartorial scheme is already coated over with views and news of coats intended for the first days of Autumn, those days when formal, elegant clothes seem a delightful novelty after the nonchalant, comfortable attire worn throughout the Summer months when comfort is a more important consideration than color, cut or chic. You will find, we think, that the sartorial powers that be have prepared some wonderful styles for you, styles that will be rich and distinctive without being overwhelming or over-elaborate. For dresses—rich materials, such as velvet, brocade and metallic cloth will be used somewhat, but the ample handling and lack of trimming will offset any tendency to too much richness. Black and white will continue to be important and will be as cleverly handled as ever. Suits of black velvet trimmed with rich furs and worn with blouses of rich fabrics will also be offered. Whether these last will be much in evidence, it is as yet too early to prognosticate. Such suits make a pleasing alternative to the frock and wrap alliance so long a favorite for afternoon functions.

* * *

DESIGNED FOR the first days of Autumn is the very lovely coat shown here which was sketched chez Tollman. It is of black satin and ermine, an always likeable version of the black and white theme. There is a straight bolero stopping just back of each arm and over this a cape attached at the front of each sleeve and ending just atop the bolero in back. The shoulder yoke, cut in points, fits snugly and gives a smart silhouette which is further set off by the clever ermine collar knotted in back with scarf ends.

* * *

THE SIMPLE AFTERNOON frock, by Heim, is of tomato red crepe de Chine. It is generously trimmed with fine pin-tucking and has a becoming shoulder line formed by cutting the yoke and sleeves in one piece. The godets which give a soft flare to the skirt flounce are evenly spaced at the center front and sides. White gardenias and a red straw beret with a white grosgrain band complete the effective scheme.

SET TO START 3 OCEAN FLIGHTS

LONDON, July 26.—(INS.)—Three nations' aircraft, each of a different type and aiming at separate goals, were set today for a takeoff across the Atlantic to the United States and Canada.

Inclement weather prevailing over the ocean, however, has put a question mark on the start of these flights.

In Paris, Capt. Dieudonne Coste and Maurice Bellonte suffered a new setback to their projected flight to America when the Weather Bureau informed them deplorable conditions would last two more days. Their big plane, the Question Mark, has been ready for several days for an instant hopoff.

The British airship R-100 was cruising over the North Atlantic today in a 24-hour trial flight—its final test previous to its start for Canada early next week. The dirigible, on an earlier test flight, suffered a slight injury and was forced to postpone its Canadian visit.

At Hanworth Airdrome here, meanwhile, rested a diminutive 40-horsepower monoplane whose owners, Wolf Hirth and Oscar Weller, expect to fly to Chicago over the northern route across the Atlantic by way of the Orkneys, Iceland, Greenland and Newfoundland. The Germans landed here from Calais, whither they flew from Cologne.

'German Heir' Weds Rich Hotel Woman

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., July 26.—(AP.)—Mrs. Ora B. Wofford, wealthy owner of hotels, is the bride of William Buenz, detective for a private agency.

When they first met, last fall, Buenz represented himself as Willian von Benz, son of a wealthy German automobile manufacturer. The sheriff got him to admit the representation was incorrect.

With announcement of the wedding, Buenz explained he had been posing to gain entrance to Miami social life, for an investigation.

EGYPT ADOPTS GANDHI PLAN

CAIRO, July 26.—(AP.)—Egyptian Wafdists today borrowed a trick from Mahatma Gandhi's Indian Nationalists and declared a program of non-co-operation against the government.

The campaign will begin with non-payment of taxes.

This program was announced by the Wafdist former premier, Nahas Pasha, shortly after the termination of a secret "session of parliament" at the Saadist Club early today.

The meeting, held in defiance of King Fuad and Premier Ismail Sidky Pasha, originally was scheduled for later in the day and near the parliamentary buildings. These were heavily guarded by troops in expectation of the attempt, so the Wafdist deputies chose the club.

Abdel Salaam Fahmy, vice president of the Chamber of Deputies—adjourned by order of the King—presided. The principal action was adoption of a motion of no confidence in the government of Ismail Sidky. The deputies also approved a petition asking the King to convene a special session of Parliament.

HOLLYWOOD AND BROADWAY NEWS; REVIEW OF PICTURES

SIDE WALKS of PITTSBURGH

by WILLIAM PFARR

We're speaking lots with all in and about among the things which we expect to be reviewed here.

We've once told about our boss, Joe Plaut, who actually was a great actress.

We never used a phrase where there was room for an exclamation point.

We never wrote that Pittsburgh's women had the reputation of being the most beautiful, or that Pittsburgh theater audiences were the most critical.

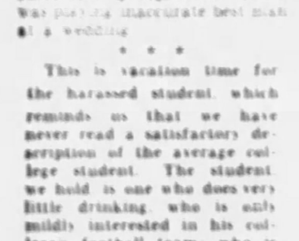
We never told of our most embarrassing experience which was playing inaccurate best man at a wedding.

* * *

This is vacation time for the harassed student, which reminds us that we have never read a satisfactory description of the average college student. The student we hold is one who does very little drinking, who is only mildly interested in his college's football team, who is interested above everything in being graduated and getting to work. We believe he puts more effort into his studies than the average man puts into his work.

Students fear the annual and semi-annual examinations. They know that, no matter how well they are prepared, an unfair professor may hand them tricky, complicated questions to answer. Most of the students we have known, once their examinations are ended, celebrate the occasion by going on a "buster," but that is hardly enough to label them all heavy drinkers.

A near tragedy occurred in the recent examinations at Pitt, all because of a drug-store clerk. The clerk, by way of idle conversation, told a very conscientious law student that a few minutes before he had seen another student copying, at the soda fountain, the answers to the examination questions in such manner as would indicate he intended to cheat.



The conscientious student hurried to the professor of that particular class with this revelation. The professor haled the clerk before the entire class and asked him to identify the cheater. The clerk enjoyed a temporary lapse of memory and failed in that test.

That "longest freight" that went through Pittsburgh, carrying 126 carloads of fresh meat was 5,248 feet, 10 inches long, a little less than a mile but when it was "stretched" it was 5,440 feet, 10 inches long, there's 18 inches of slack between cars! . . . What was probably the longest train ever to move on the P. R. R. pulled out of Dennison, O., to the west the other day . . . it had 150 cars and was 6,186 feet, 5 inches long (stretched out to 6,414 feet, 5 inches) . . . the longest passenger train that leaves Pittsburgh daily takes 17 cars from the Pennsylvania Station to New York at 3:53 a. m. . . . It's Train 34.

Comedy Team Re-United In Film Starring Eddie Quillan

By HARRISON CARROLL

HOLLYWOOD, July 26.

Another team of comedians has been reunited with the assigning of Robert Armstrong and James Gleason to feature parts in Pathe's "Looking for Trouble." This pair was split some months ago at the completion of "Oh, Yeah," and since then have been busy at different studios. With this combination supporting Eddie Quillan who stars in the film, competition should be keen for the leading honors.

The story by Walter de Leon and Russell Mack deals with gangsters but is different from its predecessors in that it treats the situations seriously from a comedy angle.

A mythical politics a gangster leader and Gleason is a member of the gang. Quillan is shown as a messenger boy for a brokerage outfit who, through a series of events, becomes mixed up with the law breakers.

Besides the comedy, the love interest must be of more than passing importance as Pathe is attempting to bolster Loretta Young from Warners for the feminine lead. Rehearsals will start shortly under the direction of Russell Mack.

PAID WITH INTEREST

Walter Huston took up the role of a financier recently when he entered into a strictly business proposition with his 22-year-old son John. John has just graduated from college and aspires to write rather than become an actor. To encourage this pursuit his father offered to finance him with the understanding that he received half of every check received through literary efforts. Last week he had a letter and enclosed was a half check for the first accepted story. Also there was an extra dollar bill with a note attached which read:

Walter Huston

"Buy something for yourself. Suggest you get hold of some bonds with it, and it will keep you."

DOUBLE CELEBRATION

Quite by coincidence, Ann Harding will receive congratulations for two events on August 7. The first is the opening of her starring picture "Holiday" at the Carthay and the second her birthday, which falls on the same day. Celebrating both the studio officials plan a large party in her honor after the showing of the picture.

ROSTER COMPLETE

The signing of Ford Sterling by Al Christie completes the list of eight comedians that will star in 58 comedies for the producer during the coming season.

Johnny Hines, who was put under contract a few days ago, has started on his first two-reeler, and stories are being prepared for the balance of the list, which includes: Clyde Cook, Charlotte Greenwood, Buster and John West, Bert Roach and Tom Patricola.

HAM, HASH AND SONGS ARE TO BE FOUND ON PENN SCREEN

By CLARENCE E. GRUNDISH

Clara Bow, the IT girl of the silents, is an alleged singer in the talkies. She's appearing on the Penn screen in one of those musical plus comedy romances titled "Love Among the Millionaires." Which is a rather ridiculous title for a rather ridiculous story. But the film does manage some laughs.

Miss Bow is a waitress at a railroad junction restaurant and she falls in love with a young brakeman. They have a couple scraps and a couple kisses for each other. Then he tells her he's really a millionaire's son and their troubles begin. Two irate fathers are out to break up the match. But there is no shortchanging the happy clinch.

It is a musical restaurant in this flicker. Every order for hash or ham and eggs brings a song. Why there is even time for a tune in the kitchen while the hungry railroaders await their food.

THE "OFFICIAL" STAR

The picture is as spotty as the two-reel comedies. And in spots its entertainment is on just as low a level. A couple of fellows tear a flivver apart—and with less efficiency than this gag would receive on a Mack Sennett lot. And there are tire blowouts with the regularity of a cuckoo clock striking the quarters of the hour.

Miss Bow sings about five songs in all. But this is no treat. Ineffective she is, too, in a scene where she makes out she's intoxicated.

Little Mitzi Green, child comedienne, sings several songs also. A clever kid, Mitzi. She and Stuart Erwin, the goofy comic, so outdistance Miss Bow, the "official" star of the picture, that she is star in name only. But then, with such a job as falls her lot, what could a poor heroine do? The sponsors of this movie must take their share of the blame.

HURRAH FOR JUNE!

Ah, but the stage gives us something. It boasts a show, titled "Steel Blues." And it is a show! Dave Schooler and June Carr see to that. They dance all over the stage, not excluding the top of a piano. And they keep the audience applauding for more all the time. Miss Carr is a grand little comedienne. She has something of the boop-a-doop manner of a Helen Kane and the wandering legs and arms of a Charlotte Greenwood. Les Gelles, two big fellows and a tiny one, do some acrobatic gestures that have novelty. The Chester Hale girls are effective in the opening number and in the finale. Scenic effects and costumes claim attention also—depicting something or other that belongs to this Machine Age of ours.

Spitalny's Band Willows Feature

Phil Spitalny and his orchestra, from the Hotel Pennsylvania in New York, will open a week's engagement in The Willows, Oakmont tonight. This orchestra has become familiar through its broadcasts over national radio hookups. Its leader is well known in Pittsburgh, through his connection with the Stanley theater several years ago. At four o'clock Monday afternoon, Spitalny and his orchestra will play a special concert at the Veterans Hospital, Aspinwall. A feature of Spitalny's appearance at The Willows will be the giving away of souvenir records, made by Spitalny and his orchestra, and personally autographed by the orchestra leader.

You can find a summer home for sale or rent, advertised in tomorrow's Classified Ads. Look for a place and secure it soon.

23 Used Autos Destroyed by Fire

PUNXSUTAWNEY, Pa., July 26.—A house and barn and 23 used cars were destroyed by fire in Brookville. The loss is estimated by firemen at $15,000. The fire started in the Piatko barn, where the cars were stored.

Student Flier, 18, Seeking License

FRANKLIN, Pa., July 26.—Joe Crossen, 18, student pilot, flew his ship from Erie to Franklin on Thursday in 45 minutes. He has 42 hours of solo flying, and is now trying for a transport license.

The Lone Star

A star from the Lone Star State, Texas, is Louise Huntington, who is to make her screen debut in the new talkie, "Up the River," scheduled for an early release. She's been recruited from the stage.

"ALL QUIET" WILL END ENGAGEMENT IN PITT TONIGHT

"All Quiet On the Western Front," master screen drama of war, ends its eight-week engagement in the Pitt tonight.

"Hell's Island," featuring Ralph Graves and Jack Holt, comes to the Harris screen today. Victor Graff continues on the stage.

"Lawful Larceny," with Lowell Sherman and Bebe Daniels prominent, will begin a second week in the Sheridan Square Monday.

The current film in the Stanley is "Top Speed," with Joe E. Brown and Bernice Claire. Miss Claire also is appearing in person on the stage.

Admonition

Never you mind the vows I shattered,
I was only a careless lad;
Think of the nights when moonlight spattered
All of the glowing trysts we had;
Never you mind the glamour vanished,
Love is only a fleeting guest;
Think of the sombre ghosts we banished
Long ago when you loved me best.

Why remember the night we parted?
Love goes over and love goes past;
Turn instead to the time we started—
Drunk with beauty too keen to last;
Why go raking the ashy embers?
Little comfort in that, my dear,
Be like a lad who still remembers

—Don Wahn.

By Way of Report

Well, we fooled you. We didn't go on any vacation at all. We heard that it was 107 on the Atlantic City sands, when it was only 99 here in Manhattan, and after wilting that day under dozens of 2,000 watt lamps at Warner Brothers' studio we decided to take our holiday at a later date. So sorreh to disappoint you all like that, but list it under your page of Dirty Tricks.

Speaking of the Warners' flicker, Madge Evans, the adorable leading lady, will be something to cheer when that film is shown in October. Roy Mack's adroit direction made it a pleasure for the entire cast of 50 to labor in the excessive heat. Ed DuPar's camera crew of grand guys rate a salute and Wallace Sullivan's scenario is one that any critic should hustily applaud.

All the male members in the picture were good, except one.

Incidentally

Wisey

And it was Bugs Baer, the newspaper comedian, who once flipped:

"The only difference in writing a column and being an actor is that when you are an actor you can tell right away when your stuff isn't funny."

Gag

Among other photoplay anecdotes is the one that involves Arthur Caesar, formerly of The Hardened Artery, but now Hollywood's best professional insulter. An independent movie producer was worried about his first film, so he summoned Caesar for counsel. In the projection room after the chin-ema had been run, he said:

"Nu? Wot have you got to suggest?"

"You have a fortune in that movie," said Arthur without revealing any emotion.

"How do you mean?" asked the man.

In Other Words

Drama

He is one of the powers in the underworld and he is respected by his crew because he fears nothing. He got rich via the racket route. Some time ago he was urged to invest a heavy sum in a "decent" business with which he was not familiar and the problems that confronted him made him gray and ill.

He was discussing the horror of it with some newspapermen the other day, who had called to interview him regarding a racket in that trade.

"Listen!" he almost wept. "I know nothing about why there is a racket—they blame me for everything. If I am such a menace in that business then get someone to buy me out—give me back my original investment. I've never had such headaches and heartaches until I turned straight and entered a legitimate business.

A Form of Criticism

The following stanza is but one of several submitted by one of those lads who waste a lotta time hating New York. His contribution is too lor.; for publication here, but here it is in part: As a columnist you entertain

In your superficial way,
But to me an orchid can't compete

—Yokel.

Yokel Boy Makes Good in Big City!

The Pity of It

Not long ago she was adored by armies of film fans, but she lost her prestage and station Out There when it became known she was a drug hound. Friends and former admirers showered her with coin to help her Pull Herself Together.

But she is tottering again and last week gave the hotel where she dwells something to worry about. The management summoned a physican to quiet her and the hypodermic put her to sleep. The doctors ordered her locked in, but the following day found her still under the influence of heavy dope, and no one could figure out how she got her hands on the stuff which doesn't work if you sneeze.

It appears that when she was locked in one room, she moved into another of four suites which she pays four—each room containing a secret place for her "snow."

Scene

Al Howard, when he had it, was one of the few lads at the race-tracks who lifted the fuzz on your arms with his daring wagers. He frequently wagered as high as $50,000 on a horse.

One day at the track after dropping such a sum on a steed that came in second, he laughed loud and long.

"You amaze me," said a pal. "How can you laugh that way after losing $50,000 on that nag?"

"I'm not laughing at myself," answered Al. "I'm laughing at those $100 bettors next to me who are crying."

Did Her Face Get Red???

Her name doesn't matter. Let it suffice to say that she is a London actress, very beautiful and talented—and adored by a Duke. Their romance is the talk of London, which made it all the easier for Noel Coward to think up a flip crack for her.

Coward encountered her at a party.

Nifty

And the most amusing observation is the one that was broadcast via the ether the other day:

"You think it has been hot in New York with its record of 99?" said the flip-quipper. "Well, it isn't really summer until the chair gets up when you do!"

MILLER VERDICT SET ASIDE

George H. Miller, a city fireman, loses $1,567.44 awarded him by a jury, in an opinion handed down in Common Pleas Court by Judge G. V. Moore setting aside the verdict.

Miller had sued the Pittsburgh, Harmony, Butler and New Castle Railways Company for $15,000 damages after an accident two years ago when while riding on the step of an interurban car near Wexford, his body struck a milk platform. His spine, arm and hip were hurt.

In reviewing the case Judge Moore said that negligence against the railways company had not been shown at the trial. Miller had boarded a crowded car and stood on the second step. He asked the conductor to change a $5 bill and dropped a piece of the change when the conductor handed it to him. In stooping to pick up the coin his body projected out of the car door and was struck by the platform. The judge said that had Miller properly occupied the step his body would have been protected.

Pittsburghers Given Honors by Dentists

Three Pittsburgh dentists were honored at the recent meeting of the American College of Dentists in Denver, by having the degree of fellowship conferred upon them. They are Dr. William F. Swanson, professor of the school of dentistry at the University of Pittsburgh; the late Dr. Thomas A. Hogan, former member of the State Dental Examining Board, and Dr. William A. McCrady, secretary of the State Examining Board.

Oliffe and John Pickpocket Victims

Detectives today extended their efforts to find the pickpocket who took $81 from Joseph Oliffe, deputy coroner, after it was learned that a man of the same description robbed Elias John, of 3412 Iowa street.

John, former chief clerk in the city public safety department, said the pickpocket got $20 from him on a street car at Sixth avenue and Wood street.

Youth Faces Hearing On Holdup Charges

Arrested in connection with a series of holdups in the Allegheny Valley, Wallace Spangler, 18, of Verona, is to be given a hearing tonight before Justice of the Peace Lawrence Sutton, at Springdale. Spangler was arrested yesterday by Springdale police, who later said two of his alleged victims had identified him.

ALDINE FILM SENDS GARY COOPER OFF TO WAR AGAIN

By MILDRED FILLMORE

The movie-makers have sent the ace nature-scarred Gary Cooper chasing off to another war. They have called him from a bridge building job in Wyoming and made him a captain in the Engineer Corps in the A. E. F.

And that's where we find him in the Aldine in a picture, "The Man from Wyoming." It's not so much on story but it manages to entertain.

LANKY AND RUGGED

Lanky and ruggedly handsome in that uniform of his, we're not surprised to learn that a little girl falls in love with him. She is an ambulance driver. The two manage to see quite a lot of each other, in spite of the war, and are secretly married. Then the heroic captain learns his wife is really a wealthy society girl.

Right away he wants her to say she'll go back to Wyoming with him, to his $350 a month job, when the war is over. But the girl can't see all her money lying idle while she presides over a kitchen sink, even for love. So in a huff he goes back to the front line.

CHANGES HER MIND

Comes a little more battlefield b'am-boom and then the Armistice. But by this time the girl has changed her mind. She hunts up her captain. She tells him she'll go back to Wyoming with him. And that is finis.

June Collyer is the girl. And Regis Toomey, former Pittsburgh boy, has a prominent role as a soldier friend of our hero.

Short screen entertainment completes the bill.

DAVEY LEE IS PLEASING AS ENRIGHT STAGE FEATURE

By KAYE GODARD

Davey Lee, "Sonny Boy," walks off with all the honors in the Enright this week. He tells, in an innocently confiding way, how much he liked the train ride, the whistle that went "choo choo," the bell that went "ding dong," and the porter that came through the car and yelled "Pittsburgh!" And the best part of it is that he seems to be in favor of Pittsburgh. He sings, too, and his accomplishments along that line are not to be ignored. His "Sonny Boy," "Little Pal" and "Mammy" are enough to make even Al Jolson himself roll over with jealousy.

Buddy Page and the Enright Band show how well they can do the blues. Other attractions on the stage also are rather good.

The screen shows Grant Withers and Sue Carol performing in "Dancing Sweeties," a gay representation of this dancing youngsters' generation. Grant Withers is the boy who has won silver cups for dancing in several contests, and Sue Carol is the peppy little girl who wins her first cup while dancing with him. After being acquainted for something like two or three hours they proceed to get married right on the dance floor.

The happy husband settles jubilantly down to married life, but in a few weeks discovers that his feet are aching for a dance floor. He can't stand seeing someone else get all the cups for dancing. His bride isn't enthused about the crowd at the dance hall, and so they part. As they met at first, so they meet again—at the dance hall—and discover that it was true love after all.

It's an enjoyable show.

Will Rogers Says:

SANTA MONICA, Cal., July 26.

Well, the big news in the papers today was Congress appropriated some money for foreign embassies to entertain on, but for no liquid entertainment. Meat and bread and cigars up to 10 cents, and also flowers sent to dead countrymen was allowable as a deduction. But if the ambassador has a little extra "embassing" he wants to put over and decides the fermented grape will be an asset, he has to make out his monthly swindle sheet as follows: "Floral wreath sent to funeral of American who lost his life overestimating his capacity to celebrate the Fourth of July." Yours,

WILL.

Camera Question Box

The Sun-Telegraph's "Camera Question Box" each day will ask a question of public interest to Pittsburghers and will photograph those interviewed.

Today's Question—New York, to save the nerves of its citizens, has established an anti-noise crusade. Does Pittsburgh need such a crusade, and what noises should be eliminated?

Joe Ripp

JOE RIPP, Salesman, East End: Yes. Pittsburgh should have some crusade of that sort. There's altogether too much noise here, especially made by those people who tear around the city in the middle of the night.

A. J. Ash

A. J. ASH, store manager, Squirrel Hill: If as much unnecessary noise as possible could be eliminated from the automobiles that rattle and pound through the streets I don't think anyone could have any complaints to make. I'm in favor of such a crusade.

Miss Lippard

MISS ESTHER LIPPARD, Clerk, Squirrel Hill: One noise that needs to be eliminated is that of hurrying traffic in front of hospitals and public institutions where there isn't anyone in authority to put a stop to it.

MISS ANN FRANKEL, Cashier, Squirrel Hill: No I don't think we need any elimination of noises. Pittsburgh isn't any noisier than a lot of other places and most people don't object to the few noises there are.

Miss Frankel

Alvin Lippard

ALVIN LIPPARD, student, Squirrel Hill: I can't think of any one noise that is particularly bothersome. People in the city get used to its disturbances and don't notice them.

E. S. HEARD, store manager, Carnegie: A crusade of that kind might help a lot, although the most objectionable noise I've noticed is the screeching of brakes of cars. If that were eliminated the city traffic noises wouldn't be bad at all.

TELL IT TO SALLY

By SALLY MARTIN

Never Look Back on the Misfortunes of Life

Have you ever been haunted by a face—th face of someone who onc: filled all your life with wonde.. and delight? Then went away—taking the sunlight from the sky and the stars from your heart?

Yes? Then you will know what a desert life is for poor little Phyllis. For Phyllis loved and lost—lost not only love but her grip on life. As we're all so apt to do when things go wrong. And now she can't find her way back again—

"Dear Sally:

"I've been reading your column for so long that I feel you're really an old friend. However, I never dreamed I'd be writing you for sympathy—how we do kid ourselves, don't we?

"It seems like yesterday that I was so awfully happy, and thought I was just sitting on top of the world! Yes, you're right! It's a man!

TOO YOUNG

"Gee, Sally! I was mad about him! And I thought he was about me. Well, he cared for a few months . . . . and then, to quote the popular song, 'He turned me down, and said "Can't we be friends?"' His only reason was that I was 'too young.' That was two y. rs ago, and now I'm 20.

"Of course, I was too proud to let him know the way I really felt, so I laughed, and started going with another boy. Oh, yes, there were plenty of dates . . . then. And good times. I tried to talk myself out of liking Jim. Then he'd come over, and I'd fall in love all over again. And when I went to dances, I'd see him with other girls, and it would nearly kill me. So I began refusing dates, so I wouldn't risk seeing him.

"Well, it all boils down to this: By my own darned foolishness, I lost all the boy friends I had, and for six solid months I've just been sitting home alone.

"Now, Sally, I'm not asking you that ridiculous question, 'How can I get him back?' I think I know how, and some day I will. But now I want to know how I can make friends again? I know I won't be able to bear looking at four walls much longer. So what'll I do?

"You've been such a comfort to others, won't you give me a hand? Even if you can't, I want you to know it's been such a relief getting this off my chest. Thanks for listening to my ravings.

"PHYLLIS."

DON'T DWELL ON PAST

Give you a hand, little sister? Well, I'll try, but the rest is up to you.

I know how sore your heart is—but you'll never heal that soreness by looking back and dwelling on the past as you have done and are doing. Brooding never buys us anything. We must look ahead into new hope—not back into old grief—if we would find happiness.

Did you ever read the story of Lot's wife, Phyllis? It's a very old Bible story—but it's as true today as it was on that far off day when it was written. Lot and his wife lived in a very wicked city. And the Lord God decreed that their city should be destroyed because of its wickedness. But because Lot and his family were righteous people, God warned them what was to happen and told them to flee and "not look back."

So, just as the day was dawning Lot and his family took packs on their backs and fled. But Lot's wife's heart was sore within her. There, behind her in the doomed city, lay the home she had loved and her treasured possessions. She could not leave them without one last look of passionate regret. And so she looked back—and was turned to a pillar of salt.

NEVER TRUER STORY

Never was there a truer story, Phyllis. Lives that look back instead of forward do turn into pillars of salt. And the reason for looking back doesn't matter—the result is always the same. One may look back in love—another may look back in remorse—or in hate—or in fear—whatever the reason, the life that looks back to the past instead of looking forward to the future, turns to bitter ash.

And you're still looking back, Phyllis, still thinking of those old days and planning how to bring them back again. Why haven't you boy friends? Why can't you find any new joy in life? That's why. Because there is no room in your heart for new friendships, new interests, new joys. You have filled your heart with the bitter ash of memories.

Lock the past behind you as you'd lock a door behind you. Turn away—go forward—and don't look back. It will be desperately hard at first. It's so easy to surrender. And it's so hard to face reality and fight for life. But only those who fight can find life. Only those who deliberately go forward, in spite of the hardships, can find the new land where joy is waiting. Fight, Phyllis, fight!

"An' I Said to HIM—and He Said to ME—" -:- DRAWN BY NELL BRINKLEY

A great, a distinguished and a kind man once helped me elbow my way through the massed streets of a convention town. Faces went by like the changing little bits of colored glass in a child's tin kaliedoscope. And bits of conversation streamed by, too, torn to shreds, only partly heard and then lost, impressions in snatches, like rags of chiffon veils, varicolored.

Much of the carnival look to the crowd was the gala visitor, from everywhere, but intermingled everywhere was the girl "who lived there," trooping home from offices, factories and shops. And the thoughtful man and I began to see that they went in twos, like twin peas, arm in arm, face to face, eager, unconscious eyes fixed brightly in each other's. Everywhere TWO girls, laughing., Laughing—no matter how flat the pocketbook or stingy the life. Chic, too, somehow, no matter how flat the purse; the busy, gay little midinette of America. And then the two of us got sorry for some of them—we wished they might travel, see the big world, get to ride horse-back every morning (do newspaper people ride horse-back every morning before they are sixty or dead?), see all the good shows, see the spiritual world as well as the actual one; in plain words, I suppose, FIND A FORTUNE and get a nibble at luxury and ease!

And then we overtook two, pretty as posters, and were ironed flat against them by the mob for a moment. And in that moment their eager little voices spoke straight into our stretched ears. And what they said was this: "And I says to HIM, and HE says to ME——"

The great man looked at me when the stream carried us on, and smiled and said, "See how you've wasted your sympathy! As long as they can say, 'I said to HIM and HE said to ME,' as long as the all-absorbing simple love interest is in the world for everyone to share, the plainest-lived will be happy. ALL of these girls are happy. They are young, and they can say 'HE said to ME and I said to HIM.'"

Since then I've heard the same thing, grammatically differing, on every rung of the social ladder.

Love is a simple thing, and it seems to be enough!

—NELL BRINKLEY.

How to Keep Well

By DR. COPELAND

Skin Diseases Due to Basic Troubles

Skin diseases are of many types. "Psoriasis," in some form, is the one which is most frequently met. It is a persistent, obstinate ailment, often resisting every effort at control.

DR. COPELAND

A person may have it and yet otherwise appear to be in perfect health. It is probable, however, there is some underlying cause which is really a form of disability. It may be some fault in digestion, in the blood or in the glands of the skin.

The skin disturbance may appear in one patch or in several well-defined patches. There is a red background, and this is covered with the delicate, silvery scales or crusts. In children the crusts may form on the scalp, and when these are rubbed off there is bleeding.

Some authorities in skin diseases believe that kidney trouble or gout is present in the system and the skin disturbance is only a symptom.

In psoriasis or other chronic skin disorders it is to be suspected that the intestinal tract is out of order. Constipation forms one of the greatest foes to normal health. In its chronic form it produces degenerative changes in the system. The wastes of the body, not being properly eliminated, encourage the development of bacterial poisons. These are carried to every part of the body, including the skin. It is not to be wondered at then that skin diseases follow.

It is most important that the bowels be kept open, either by proper diet and exercise, or, failing this, by laxatives that are found to fit your own particular case and as prescribed by your doctor. Sometimes simple enemas taken at intervals will serve to keep the intestinal tract free from the waste which otherwise clogs it. But the important thing is that the waste products be carried away by proper kidney and intestinal action.

The intense itching accompanying psoriasis is greatly relieved by a sponge bath. Either boric acid or bicarbonate of soda may be added to the water. Sea baths are unusually refreshing in these cases.

There is no disputing the fact that careful attention should be given the diet. Most of the writers on skin diseases urge restriction or complete avoidance of meat. Excesses in protein foods seem to be disturbing factors in this skin trouble.

It is essential to have a simple diet of easily digested foods. The skin must be kept in perfect condition as to cleanliness. Lastly, and most important, follow your doctor's orders as to correcting the underlying cause of your skin trouble, whatever it is.

Answers to Health Queries

Miss M. H. Q.—What do you advise me to do? I have a lump the size of a pencil head under my arm.

A.—It would be wise to consult a doctor for an examination. A lump of any kind usually requires surgical procedure. Do not neglect it. It probably is entirely harmless, but the safe thing is to find out at once.

* * *

Reader, Q.—What causes heartburn and what is the remedy?

2.—How can one reduce a high abdomen? Also a large bust?

A.—Heartburn is due to acidity and this in turn is caused by improper digestion and poor elimination. Correct the diet and keep the system clear.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

There is a newcomer on the toilet table. It is a powder brush made of goat's hair. Powder is fluffed on with a swan's down puff. Put on in a cloud and patted in. Then the brush gets in its fine work. It brushes down from the forehead, taking the powder from the hair line. Then it starts at the chin and jaw bone and travels upward. Its purpose is to do away with an uneven applicatibn, to insure against spottiness. The eyebrow brush is not to be retired: the powder brush is no substitute for that. It is too soft.

Sometimes a blackhead will form in the pore from which an eyelash emerges. Rubbing the eyelid sets up an irritation and a stye appears, than which there is nothing more distressing to the candidate for beauty honors. Applications of vaseline every night to the eyelids will not only soften the pore barricades but will promote a thicker, longer growth of eye curtains.

Massage is more effective if it follows a warm bath. Before giving the complexion its nightly anointing, bathe briskly with warm water and soap, then lay on the washcloth, which has been dipped out of warm water. Have the skin surface thoroughly dry when plying cream. A heavy emollient is best. It keeps the fingers from slipping and the massage will be deeper, stirring to activity the lowest layers of muscles. Let the cream remain on over night. In the morning use cold water. Then an astringent. Fifteen minutes later the drug store blushes can be restored.

Horoscopes

Sunday, July 27

Sunday's horoscope shows the prospect of recognition, favors or advancement from those in employment. New projects engage the attention, but there is a sign of anxiety and obstruction, with menace from many angles.

Those whose birthday it is may expect a year of some recognition or favors from those in authority or position, and there may be some new plans and projects, but these are attended by a menace of obstacles or opposition inimical to financial success or fulfilled ambitions.

A child born on this day may be deep, mystical and idealistic in his views, and while he may reach success in employment he may not make a brilliant success financially.

Monday, July 28

Monday's astrological forecast is for success and altogether splendid prospects and progress, but these are subject to strife and confusion unless the proclivity to impulsive acts and turbulence be suppressed. There may be a breaking up of old congestions to make room for fine progress and personal as well as business satisfaction, but much depends on one's own discretion, application and self-control.

Those whose birthday it is are assured of a year of stabilized affairs and excellent progress if they will but restrain all tendency to disputes, quarrels and impetuous moves. With self-control and wisdom there is promise of great prosperity and the happiest of personal associations.

A child born on this day will be able, industrious and ambitious, but it should be trained to curb its proclivity to rash and impulsive conduct and quarrelsome and hasty speech. With control it should attain good position in life through its own talents and efforts.

Trifles, Light as Summer Love

Next to trying to be coquettish and feminine in a suit of pajamas the most difficult feat for a woman these days is the effort to look efficient and forceful in a trailing skirt and a floppy hat.

Every woman has moments of honest self-confession, when she has to admit that almost any other woman could have married her husband when he was in that soft, pliant, complaisant marrying-mood. The girl doesn't matter much, if the time, the place and the mood are favorable.

CORRECT MANNERS

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Beginning a Correspondence

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

I am a girl 16 years of age. There is a boy I have liked about two years, but he left home and later we moved out of town. I have his address. Do you think it would be proper to write him first or shall I send my address to my girl friend to give to him?

S.

Don't do either. If the young man wishes to write you there are apparently ways for him to find out your address and ask if you will correspond with him. Don't begin this pursuing idea so early in life, dear girl, for it will warp your taste. The same suggestion applies to E. W., who enclosed her question with yours. And she is only 13.

The Letter Salutation

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

I am writing on behalf of two high school girls. These two girls, who are seniors, met two young men while on a trip with the school. These young men entertained them while they were on this trip and the girls would like to write and thank them for their courtesy. The difficulty is that they do not know just exactly how to address the boys. They called them by their first names while in the city, but are afraid it will seem too forward to start their letter as "Dear John" yet, they do not wish to be too formal and say "Dear Mr. Jones." J. W.

Since the girls called the boys by their first names while they were with them in the city, they would, naturally, begin their letters with the use of the first name. Anything else would, I should think, make the boys wonder why the change from the informal to the formal.

Love's Reawakening -:- Continuation of Loves Awakening

By ADELE GARRISON

Lillian, Madge and Katherine Gather for a Discussion

It was not of her own errand to the farmhouse, however, whatever it might be, that Lillian spoke first when we had come into the room which she and I were to share through the crowded holidays.

"Let's get this business about Mary and Noel over with first. You said you wanted to tell me—what Mary had told you——"

"I do want to tell you all about it, but I'd like to have Katherine here, too."

"Yes, she'll have a line on Noel if anybody has," Lillian agreed.

"And Mary consented to have me tell both of you about it," I added.

"The child must be desperate." Lillian commented dryly. "I hope we'll be able to help her. Do you suppose Katrina can come over now? Harry is in a tearing hurry to get back for some conference or other on some work he's doing. I don't mind telling you, but you only, for a little while, that he's flirting with the talkies, and will probably make a good thing of it."

"Oh, Lillian, aren't you thrilled?"

"Not particularly," she rejoined. "It'll run into money, of course, but I'd rather see him firmly established as a dramatist first. This will sidetrack him, I'm afraid. If only Phil Veritzen would stop acting the role of the original Gadarene twine, and get back on his job, that drama of Harry's would be produced, and I have faith to believe he'd take his place where he belongs. You haven't heard from the old goat, have you?"

"That is not the first time you've asked that," I said tensely. "Please—don't ask it again."

My tone was one which I never use toward Lillian, but she smiled at me without rancor, and with a certain amused comprehension in her one.

"You may not have heard from him," she said lazily, "but I'll lay a little wager you've heard of him, and that not pleasantly. It takes something extra to stir that placid temper of yours, m'love."

"You'll have a taste of a real temper, if you speak of Phil Veritzen's writing to me again," I told her as I went out of the door.

"But you'll beg my pardon, like a little lady, when a letter does come from the old goat," she shot after me as I went down the hall to Noel's room, where I knew I should find the little nurse, and I found myself shaking with nervous anger.

I knocked softly upon Noel's door and Katherine answered immediately. I nodded smilingly past her at the young violinist who was sitting in an easy chair by the fire, a low table drawn up before him with a chessboard and men in battle array upon it. Mary was seated upon the other side of the table, and to all appearances they were at peace with themselves and the world.

"I was just coming to find you," Katherine said cheerily. "My patient is so much improved that I'm wondering if he may have a special dinner of his favorite dishes—I'll tell you about them as we go. Be sure to beat him, Mary," she called back, as she stepped through the door.

"Didn't I tell you another 'healthy mad on' would be good for him?" she murmured delightedly. "He fussed and fumed all the morning because Mary had gone for Christmas greens, acted like a regular spoiled baby. By the time she returned he had gotten it out of his system, and I think there went with it enough of his absurd reaction to that miserable letter, whatever it was, to enable him to behave like a normal human being for an hour or two. And there's nothing like chess—they both like it—to keep people's emotions down and their minds active, which is what we wish just now. But how I'd like to know what was in that letter Noel burned."

"I can't tell you that," I told her as I turned the knob of Lillian's door, "but I can tell you who wrote it, and I can also show you the mate to it, which Mary received."

Household Hints

If the brown shoes are too light in color to please you, they may be made darker by rubbing with milk to which a few drops of household ammonia have been added. As soon as dry polish with a clean, dry cloth.

Don't say you "haven't time to bother" when the youngster asks if he or she can help you with your work. There is always some little job that can be done by small hands and it is a wonderful thought to encourage—that of helping mother.

Don't forget to give your jewelry a bath in baking soda and water occasionally and remove the soil and grease that it gathers from constant use. Frequently we see ugly marks on arms and necks that are caused from soiled chains and their owners would be amazed if they thought this was so.

Every house-cleaning we wonder how to get the glassware with the small openings clean and sparkling. If yours do not please you try this: Roll up in small pieces some blotting paper. Wet and soak them well and place in the decanter with warm water, then shake vigorously. Rinse with clear, lukewarm water and dry on the outside with a soft cloth. Put the decanter to drain and when dry it will be as clear as when new.

STEEL INGOT OUTPUT AT 55%

Appearances Point Toward Summer Lull Holding Later Than Is Usual

By B. E. V. LUTY.

Steel production has been practically stationary in the last two or three weeks, at slightly above 55 per cent of total steel ingot making capacity. According to precedent this would in an ordinary year indicate that an upturn is due almost at once, but this has been a peculiar year in some respects. As closely as possible it showed ordinary or usual relationship between production in first and second quarters, representing the principal swing, but it was peculiar in having peak production so early, also in summer dullness becoming pronounced two or three weeks earlier than usual. It looks now as if summer dullness would extend to a later time than usual.

AUGUST IMPROVEMENT

The earliest predictions of improvement are for late August, and that would be later than usual. These predictions are based upon expectation of seasonal swing. There are, however, other predictions, of improvement later in the year, and they are based upon general business improving, practically ignoring the seasonal factor. There are left some observers who doubt whether there will be much increase in steel tonnage at any time this year. Their basis is that there is at the present time really a good-sized tonnage of steel being shipped and consumed, and that not enough industries can be picked out, as promising increased requirements, to make much difference in total steel, while there is always a chance that some of the present active lines may not do so well.

There is something in this argument that steel tonnage at present is not so small after all. The percentage rate of operation looks low, but that is against present capacity, and capacity has been increasing year by year, partly on account of rivalry between certain companies and partly because efforts to reduce costs always and perhaps naturally enough result in greater capacity.

Taking 56 per cent for computing purposes, that would represent production of 114,000 gross tons of steel ingots per working day, which is far above the rate in July, 1924, and not very much below the rate in July of a couple of other years. This is quite a tonnage to go to consumers when one must count out almost entirely consumption in connection with freight cars, automobiles, farm implements and oil and gas well drilling. There is very little steel consumption in these items. Structural fabricating and line pipe manufacture are very active, shipbuilding is doing moderately well and there must be much general line consumption in miscellaneous industries that cannot be observed in detail.

It is perfectly true to say that there is a depression, but the depression is rather mild relative to some that have occurred in the past, and it is by no means uniformly distributed. Shipments of the structural fabricating shops in the first half of this year were actually heavier than in the first half of last year, though by only 1.1 per cent. There was an increase of 7.8 per cent from the first quarter of this year to the second quarter, but that is seasonal. Comparing the half years there was about 1 per cent increase in shipments of steel barrels, but as that had been a rapidly growing industry the small increase is equivalent in a sense to a decrease. In contrast, automobile production in the first half of this year was off 31.8 per cent from the first half of last year, and shipments of metal furniture, including shelving, decreased 16 per cent.

NEW YORK, July 26.—(AP)—The Mid-Continent Petroleum Corporation has notified the American Petroleum Institute and the Federal Trade Commission that it has withdrawn from the code of oil marketing practices.

The corporation, which has one of the largest and most complete refineries in the Mid-Continent district, gave as its reason that competing companies, signers of the code, have not adhered to it.

FORT WORTH, July 26.—Proration has apparently "blown up" for the moment, at least, in the Darst Creek oil field in Guadalupe County, and with all wells open, the area is estimated to be producing a minimum of 75,000 barrels daily as against 20,000 barrels daily last week.

POWER STATION PUMPS LARGE

A single pumping station large enough to supply all of the water requirements for a city two and one-half times as large as Pittsburgh would be considered almost unbelievable by the average person, yet that is the capacity of the pumps at Colfax power station of the Duquesne Light Company, which furnish the water used to condense the steam after it passes through the turbines. For this purpose alone approximately 800,000,000 gallons of water are pumped every day out of the Allegheny River, through the Colfax condensers and back into the river again. During the same period all of the people in Pittsburgh use only 115,000,000 gallons.

Nearly 2,000 people visit Colfax Station every year, and the visitors' book at the plant shows registrations from all over the world. During the last two years the countries represented by the visiting engineers included France, England, Germany, Holland, Italy, Switzerland, Russia, Sweden, Belgium, Austria, China, Japan, New Zealand, Uruguay, Siberia and Czecho-Slovakia.

TO USE EIGHT HOUR DAY

A final elimination of the 12-hour working day, involving shorter hours for men on that schedule and giving employment to others, has been worked out in the plants of the Universal Atlas Cement Company, according to B. F. Affleck, president of the company.

Mills which were owned by the former Atlas company came under United States Steel Corporation rules through the purchase of the Atlas Portland Cement Company's properties and business in January and their consolidation with the Universal Portland Cement Company, a Steel Corporation subsidiary. One of these rules is that no man may work more than 10 hours per day or more than six consecutive days.

Formerly some of the men employed in the Waco (Tex.) and Leeds (Ala.), mills worked more than 10 hours, many of them 12 hours per day. As cement making is a continuous process which keeps the kilns burning 24 hours a day, this meant two shifts per day, except in the shops. Substitution of three instead of two shifts per day was completed on July 15, Mr. Affleck announced.

Pittsburgher Made Factory Manager

WHEELING, W. Va., July 26.—J. T. Osler, president of the Continental Roll and Steel Foundry Company announced the appointment of H. A. Lomax, of Pittsburgh, as general manager of the Wheeling plant of the company, formerly the Wheeling Mold and Foundry Company. He succeeds H. E. Field, Wheeling, who becomes vice president and treasurer. Mr. Lomax has been with the Duquesne Steel Foundry Company, which is also a unit of the new Continental Company and prior to that was with the United Engineering and Foundry Company and the Mackintosh-Hemphill Company.

D. T. & I. Shares In Line for Dividend

PHILADELPHIA, July 26.—With payment of all back interest on adjustment bonds, shares of Detroit, Toledo and Ironton Railroad Company, bulk of which are held by Pennroad Corporation, have been put in line for dividend payments. Interest on adjustment bonds was cumulative so that back interest had to be paid before dividends could be disbursed on company's stock. It is understood here that no time has been set for inaugurating dividends, as this may depend upon trend of railroad earnings, although earnings of Detroit, Toledo and Ironton have been holding up very well.

BUSINESS INDEX DROPS TO 93%

NEW YORK, July 26.—Business in the United States is running true to form in mid-summer of a depression year. Industrial activity is at a low level, accentuated by shutdown, vacations and a general marking of time till the turn of the tide becomes evident, says the Business Week in its report covering the week ending today. The business index, declining to 93.4 per cent this week, as against 96.4 per cent last week and 112.2 per cent in the corresponding week last year, will probably continue to decline until August.

Building continues well sustained, somewhat beyond the point of seasonal decline, and the fair volume of contracts placed in the first half will exert their force upon general business from now on. General trade has slackened considerably as the cumulative influence of six months of lowered purchasing power and depleted stocks begins to be felt, but business sentiment has perceptibly freshened as the index has dropped.

Although the Federal Reserve has relaxed its support somewhat, it is encouraging that the rate of expansion of member bank credit continues high and rising.

Malleable Casting Output Decreases

Production of malleable castings in June as reported by Department of Commerce amounted to 39,269 net tons against 62,035 tons in May and 72,232 tons in June, 1929. For the first six months of 1930, output was 353,989 tons against 467,782 tons in the first half of last year. Shipments for June were 43,739 tons, against 60,848 tons and 72,346 tons, respectively. For the six-month periods shipments were 348,327 tons and 463,228 tons, respectively.

Rails Overcome Freight Car Shortage

At the peak of the freight traffic movement last fall, when transportation requirements were heaviest, the railroads did not have a single car shortage. In 1922 they had 40,000 more cars than in 1929 and handled a smaller volume of traffic, but car shortages totaled almost 180,000. The whole-hearted cooperation of the shippers, together with increased efficiency of operation, is largely responsible for this marked improvement.

These facts were brought out by R. H. Aishton, president, American Railway Association, in an analysis of "How the Railways Overcame Car Shortages."

R. K. O. TO SHOW INCREASE IN EARNINGS

Second Quarter Net Will Exceed Same 1929 Period; Universal Deal Under Way

NEW YORK, July 26.—Earnings of the Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation, for the quarter ended June 30, which probably will be published about August 1, likely will be much better than in the second quarter of 1929, but will not score anything like the gain reported for the first quarter of 1930 over the like period of last year. There was a general slump in the theater attendance all over the country in April, May and June, largely the result of depressed business conditions. July is said to be showing some improvement.

GOOD FIRST QUARTER — —

In the first quarter of 1930 R-K-O showed an operating profit of $2,000,403, which was more than eleven times the operating profit of $181,373 for the first quarter of 1929 and only $248,000 less than for the entire 1929 year. Total income for first quarter of last year was, however, swelled to $658,209 by inclusion of profit of $486,836 from sale of real estate. In the second quarter of 1929 there was an operating deficit of $28,154, but there was other income of $54,509 from further sale of real estate so that total profit for the six months, before federal taxes and subsidiary preferred dividends, was $694,864.

SEASONAL FACTORS

This year income of R-K-O is receiving no assistance from sale of superfluous properties, profits being derived strictly from operations. With the splendid results of the first quarter, even if the second quarter drops down greatly, as it would even under normal seasonal influences, the showing for the first half year will make excellent comparison.

R-K-O is understood to be negotiating with Universal Pictures for an agreement similar to that concluded in May with Columbia Pictures by which it contracted for the entire 1930-31 Columbia output of 20 soundfilm productions for first run exhibition in the R-K-O circuit. It is anticipated that such agreement will be reached in the near future. This will insure the first run productions of three studios, including its own.

GENERAL TRADE SHOWS GAIN

WASHINGTON, July 26.—Business for the week ended July 19, as measured by the volume of check transactions, showed an increase of 16 per cent over the preceding week, but was below the level of the period ended July 20, 1929. Iron and steel prices, as measured by the composite index, showed no change from last week, but recorded a decline of 10 per cent from the corresponding period a year ago.

Building, the activity of steel mills, and wheat receipts at primary markets for the week ended July 12, were all greater than the preceding period, due mainly to the greater number of working days. As compared with the week ended July 13, 1929, building and steel operations were smaller, while the receipts of wheat in producing centers were greater.

Houdaille Hershey Earnings Decrease

DETROIT, July 26.—Houdaille Hershey Corporation for six months to June . shows net profit of $360,014 after all charges and Federal tax, equal to 25 cents per share on 556,571 shares of class B stock after dividend requirements on 174,480 no par shares, class A stock. In the first half of 1929 the company reported net profit of $2,177,857, excluding earnings of one subsidiary which if added would make the 1929 earnings about $2,277,857.

LOCAL TRADE IN SUMMER LULL

Most Retailers Maintain Stocks at Low Point; Upswing Expected Soon

Midsummer dullness continues to characterize the local trade situation, both wholesale and retail, according to R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review. High temperatures have noticeably contributed towards slowing down of operations. Jobbers of dry goods and wearing apparel report buying comparatively inactive and generally in small amounts. It is the general impression that stocks of most retailers are being maintained at a comparatively low point and that there will be a fairly active demand for seasonable lines during the next few weeks.

CROPS DAMAGED

Construction contracts continue to average about 40 per cent below normal with residential construction particularly slow. Demand for lumber and other building materials continues slow. The extremely hot and dry weather has damaged farms and garden crops very materially and buying by residents of the rural districts is expected to be adversely affected thereby.

Demand for electrical equipment is somewhat lighter than it was, although operations are not very much lower than they were last year at this time. Movement of plumbing and heating supplies continues at a low rate.

CRUDE OIL CURB

Another rather sharp reduction is reported in the production of crude oil throughout the nation and Pennsylvania operators are meeting this week in an effort to further reduce output of Pennsylvania oil which is largely used for lubricating purposes, and the price paid for some is now too low to be profitable.

Complaints regarding slow collections continues to prevail, and no appreciable improvement in the situation is noted.

LACK OF RAIN HURTS TRADE

The recent withering drought was felt particularly by one Pittsburgh business when lack of rain permitted umbrellas to go unused for many days. Samuel Cohen, proprietor of Sam's Umbrella Shop, reports that there was no rush to buy his merchandise until Tuesday of this week, when the Pittsburgh weather forecaster predicted storms, and the next day or two after the downpour.

Cohen says he finds early spring and late fall the best seasons for selling umbrellas. In his 12 years of business at 635 Penn avenue, he has repaired possibly 100,000 umbrellas and sold thousands of others. In his shop may be found all kinds—all colors—all sizes that are practical.

Cohen learned his business from his father, who was an umbrella peddler in the Pittsburgh district many years ago. Sam's Umbrella Shop makes umbrellas to order and is equipped to repair almost any kind.

Business Machines Foreign Sales Up

F. W. Nichol, assistant to the president of International Business Machines Corporation, and in charge of the company's foreign business, reports an extensive gain in the I. B. M. South American business to date this year. For the first half of 1930, South American sales showed a 67 per cent gain over the corresponding 1929 period.

In June, the company's South American organization exceeded, for the sixteenth consecutive month, its sales quota of all of I. B. M. products, including electric tabulating and accounting machines, electric time-recording, indicating and signalling equipment, and scale and store equipment.

Mining Congress Appoints Official

NEW YORK, July 26.—Corn Products Refining June quarter profit equals $1.21 a share on 2,530,000 shares of common, against $1.07 a share in the preceding quarter and $1.18 in the June, 1929, quarter.

Six months' profit equals $2.28 a common share, against $2.36 a share in the first half of 1929.

ROUND TABLE OF BUSINESS

L. C. L. FREIGHT REDUCED 30% SINCE 1920

Use of Motor Trucks for Haulage Is Primary Cause of Reduction

Increased utilization of motor trucks for the movement of freight provides a serious problem for the railroads, according to R. K. Stackhouse, of Philadelphia, general superintendent of stations and transfers, Pennsylvania Railroad, in a recent address before the convention of the Motor Transport Division of the American Railway Association. He pointed out that since 1920 the railroad's transportation of less than carload lot freight has decreased approximately 30 per cent, due largely to increasing use of the motor truck. He said:

"As to what should be done to meet motor truck competition, it is felt that this feature divides itself into two phases: first, expeditious movement of traffic by railways, and, second, what may be done in highway motor trucking.

EFFECT ON RAIL TRAFFIC

"The effect of motor trucks on railway movement is shown by the fact that in 1920, Class I steam railways handled 89,901,-495 tons of less than carload lot freight; in 1926, it had dropped to 68,296,686 tons; a decrease of 24.02 per cent. In 1928 it had further declined to 63,260,249 tons, a decrease of 297 per cent from 1926. The motor truck has been a potent factor in less than carload lot freight haulage, and each railroad has no doubt determined the extent to which this feature affects is revenues.

USE GAINS RAPIDLY

"The number of trucks registered in the United States as of the end of each year indicated represents a barometer of motor truck progress. At the end of 1920 there were 1,006,-082 trucks registered, while on the same day in 1925 there were 2,441,700, an increase of 143 per cent over 1920. On the last day of 1929, there were registered in the United States, 3,379,854 motor trucks, an increase of 38 per cent over 1925.

"With a proper understanding of the ability of each form of transportation, there is reason to believe that the railroads and the motor trucks may be properly co-related into a whole picture for transportation service to the public."

SHIPMENTS OF PIPE GAIN

Gas and oil pipe manufactured in the Pittsburgh - Youngstown area is moving in increasing amounts to the Southwest, according to E. W. Smith, vice president of the Pennsylvania Railroad. Shipments over the Pennsylvania are running at a rate in excess of 500 cars monthly.

Credit for a considerable volume of the pipe being purchased in local territory is being given to the Pennsylvania Railroad, which some months ago made a survey of the situation and arranged for a freight movement from Pittsburgh to St. Louis 24 hours faster than the customary operation. Pipe loaded daily in Pittsburgh, McKeesport and Youngstown is moved out every evening and delivered in St. Louis 24 hours later by the Pennsylvania. The Pennsy's movement out of Pittsburgh and Youngstown is said to be on a more rapid and regular railroad schedule than that afforded from any other source and contractors for the pipe lines are consequently looking with increased favor on local mills as a supply point for pipe.

COUNTY ROADS IMPROVED

Another link in Allegheny County's improved road system is being completed in the Ingomar district—the Brandt School road. The three-mile stretch is being laid by Donatelli & Donatelli, a Homewood concern.

This job is one of a series that Donatelli & Donatelli have undertaken in the Greater Pittsburgh district in the firm's nine years of operation here.

An uncle and nephew are partners in this busy concern. They are Frank Donatelli and Antonio Donatelli.

The company engages in many kinds of construction work, laying also sewer and water lines, and city streets.

Lindbergh boulevard, in North Braddock, was another job in which they had a hand, the excavating being done by Donatelli & Donatelli.

In 1928 they laid five miles of water line in Pittsburgh. Last year they laid four miles of sewer line for Munhall. Fifteen streets were put down by them in Stowe township last year. Their bid won a 2-mile street contract in Monessen recently.

The concern employs about four-score workmen during its business "peak," and operates a fleet of trucks and two steam shovels.

DULL WEEK IN GLASS TRADE

With actual requirements running low the flat glass industry in general just encountered what is thought to be its quietest week during the present year, according to National Glass Budget. Very little new business was placed with the manufacturers and jobbers were taking care of a limited demand. Business that was in evidence was for small shipments.

The plate glass market is extremely quiet. This is due to the abnormal closing down of the automobile manufacturing plants, dullness in the jobbing business and the inactivity in the mirror trade. While some improvement is expected later on, production of plate glass is off as well as demand. It is believed that only about 50 per cent of the continuous process capacity of the country is operating, while practically all of the plants that are equipped with the old casting, grinding and polishing process are idle. This state of affairs will continue throughout the remainder of the month at least, and perhaps longer.

Manufacturers of window glass report that there is no improvement in demand for that product. From reports the opinion is gained that business is better with the distributing trade west of the Mississippi than it is for those in the eastern part of the country. At that, demand is only about one-half of what it generally is in normal years. No change has taken place in the operating capacity.

Kelvinator Profits Show Good Increase

DETROIT, July 26.—Kelvinator Corporation for nine months ended June 30, shows net profit of $2,112,965 after depreciation, interest, taxes, etc., equal to $1.78 per share on 1,166,106 shares. These earnings exclude refrigeration Discount Corporation and Kelvinator of Canada, and compare with $1,301,65[illegible], or $1.10 a share on 1,178,043 shares in the [illegible] period of the previous fiscal year. June quarter net profit was $1,414,467, equal to $1.19 a share, against $1,441,80[illegible] or $1.22 a share in the June quarter, 1929.

National Supply Makes Exchange Offer

By GEORGE H. SNYDER.

THE NATIONAL SUPPLY COMPANY has made a formal offer to the stockholders of Spang, Chalfant and Company, Inc., for an exchange of stock to complete the consolidation of the two organizations, plans for which were announced recently. The offer will expire on September 23.

The letter calls attention to the fact that a quarterly dividend of $1.25 a share has been declared on the common stock of the National Supply Company. This is payable August 15 to stockholders of record August 5. In order to get this dividend, Spang stockholders must exchange their stock by August 5.

The terms of exchange are one-half share of preferred and one-half share of common stock of the National Supply Company for every three and one-quarter shares of Spang, Chalfant common. The Spang preferred stock will not be affected by the consolidation. The company's corporate identity will be retained.

Holds Controlling Stock

IN CONNECTION WITH the offer it was made known that the National Supply Company already has acquired more than 71 per cent of the Spang common stock. This was obtained by private negotiation with the principal stockholders. These interests were represented in the transaction by J. H. Hillman, Jr.

In discussing the consolidation, Gordon Fisher, president of Spang, Chalfant, said in his letter to stockholders:

"The National Supply Company is the largest distributor and manufacturer of oil well supplies and distributor of oil country tubular goods, such as this company manufactures, in the United States, if not in the world. They have an unbroken history of success extending for a period of over 30 years, and have constantly paid dividends on both the preferred and common stock of their company during this period. The dividend at the present time on the common stock is at the rate of $5 per annum, and during the last three years they have paid, at the end of each year, an extra of $2 per share.

Plant Improvements Needed

"IN THESE DAYS of mechanical changes and constant improvements in processes, requiring great expenditures of capital, your officers and directors saw that such expenditures would make dividends on the common stock appear very distant, whereas the two companies, by combining their surplus earnings over and above the dividend requirements, should be able to construct or develop any new improvements that might be required.

"There is every prospect that the combined earnings of the consolidated companies will be greater than their earnings if operated separately, and the future security of the consolidated companies is much stronger than if operated separately."

National Earnings Gain

NATIONAL SUPPLY is expected to report second quarter earnings far in excess of the preceding three months as well as the corresponding period of last year. Net profit after taxes and subsidiary preferred dividends will be about $938,000. After deducting dividend on the 7 per cent preferred stock, this would be equivalent to $2.95 a share on 300,000 shares of common stock. In the first quarter net profit was $174,830 or 40 cents a share while in the second quarter of 1929 net was $671,-770 or $2.11 a share.

For the first six months of the year profit will be about $1,113,000 or $3.35 a share. This was less than $1,637,315 or $4.91 a share in the first half of 1929 but exceeded $738,700 or $.63 a share in the first six months of 1928.

The consolidation with Spang, Chalfant will be exceptionally helpful to National Supply. While a large tonnage of pipe is distributed to the oil trade, the margin of profit on this type of the business has been small. The acquisition of the company's own source of supply will place the sale of pipe on a far more satisfactory basis.

TRUSCON STEEL EARNINGS UP

YOUNGSTOWN, O., July 26.—Net earnings of the Truscon Steel Company in the second quarter were four times the figures for the first three months, the quarterly statement reveals.

The company reported net earnings for the quarter of $601,280.19, compared with net earnings of $130,905.16 in the first quarter. The earnings in the second quarter, however, were substantially lower than those of the same period in 1929 when net profit of $1,003,494.11 after all deductions was reported.

Gross income of the company in April, May and June was $8,-471,164.45, compared with gross income of $5,138,821.91 in the first quarter and gross income of $10,-363,357.63 in the corresponding quarter of last year.

Trading profits in the second quarter were $630,543.68, compared with $130,441.34 first quarter and with $788,494.11 last year. Earnings from other sources were $35,736.19, compared with $325,-000 in the corresponding period of 1929.

BIG RAIL DEAL O. K. SOUGHT

WASHINGTON, July 26.—The Southern Pacific Railroad has filed a formal application with the Interstate Commerce Commission to acquire control of the St. Louis Southwestern Railroad, known as the Cotton Belt, by purchase of capital stock.

The road now owns 35 per cent of stock in the "Cotton Belt" and asked the commission for authority to purchase 50,000 shares of preferred and 37,000 shares of common at an approximate cost of $7,800,000.

At the same time the Southern Pacific asked the commission to change its general consolidation plan to place the Cotton Belt within the Southern Pacific system instead of the Illinois Central system.

The Cotton Belt Railroad owns or controls about 1,800 miles of standard gauge railroads and serves portions of Missouri, Illinois, Arkansas and Texas.

More Railroad Equipment Installed

The railroads of the United States in the first six months of 1930 placed 49,208 new freight cars in service, the Car Service Division of the American Railway Association reports.

In the same period last year, 32,794 new freight cars were placed in service.

The railroads on July 1 this year had 24,649 new freight cars in order compared with 39,638 cars on the same day last year and 14,659 on the same day two years ago.

PAY SCALES IN MINES HERE FIRM

Wage Cutting by Operators In West Virginia Fields Causing Labor Unrest

Low prices and lack of active demand still predominate in the coal trade. Operators anticipate improved demand in the fall months with a revival of domestic business and a probable increase in industrial requirements.

Sales of slack have been made at prices as low as 75 cents a ton which is off five cents a ton from the minimum price of a week ago.

Most mines are working an average of only three days a week with no immediate prospects for improvement.

WAGES MAINTAINED

Operators in this district are making a fight to maintain wages in the face of continued cutting of both scales and prices by producers in Northern West Virginia fields. A price of 30 cents a ton for loading coal in the Southern fields has become general. At some mines the scale has been pushed down to 20 cents.

The loading of eight tons of coal is a good days work for a miner, with a three or four-day week it is obvious that these operators are pushing labor to a breaking point. Strikes at various mines have broken out in protest against the policy being followed by the West Virginia operators.

MARKETS REGAINED

Some progress in regaining old markets has been made by the Pittsburgh Coal Company. The use of cleaning plants for preparing coal has made it possible for this company to supply customers which have been using coal mined in other districts for a long period of years.

WESTERN GRAIN RATES CUT

WASHINGTON, July 26.—(AP)—Substantial reductions in freight rates on wheat and other grains moving through Western territory were ordered yesterday by the Interstate Commerce Commission, effective October 1.

The findings of the commission justifying a decrease on wheat, other grains and grain products such as flour and meal resulted from the commission's compliance with the Hoch-Smith resolution of Congress, which ordered products of agriculture affected by depression to be given as low railroad rates as possible.

In addition the commission found that wheat, coarse grains, flour and meal should all be moved on a single rate, and in addition Western railroads were ordered to adopt a new system of making such rates in Western territory.

Du Pont's Offering Fully Subscribed

WILMINGTON, Del., July 26.—E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Company received virtually full subscription under the offer to common stockholders of the right to subscribe to an additional issue of 357,071 shares of common stock, pro rata to their holdings on June 5, 1930, at a price of $80 a share.

BUICK OFFERS FOUR NEW SERIES

President Strong Claims Eight Is Outstanding Car in Firm's History

Exciting the interest of the motoring world and arousing a widespread comment of approval, the new 1931 Buick line powered with straight-eight valve-in-head motors was presented by Buick dealers to the public today. Offered in four new series, the 1931 Buick Eight holds many surprises.

In addition to its advanced straight-eight valve-in-head power plant, the new car also has a synchro-mesh transmission, new insulated body by Fisher, and many other important advances which, according to E. T. Strong, president of the Buick Motor Company, make the new eight the outstanding car of the company's history.

No radical changes have been made in the general appearance of the new bodies, but a wealth of fine details and new appointments have been embodied to increase the luxurious riding comfort of the new Buick Eight.

In addition to the synchro-mesh transmission other engineering advancements are: Engine oil temperature regulator, dual carburetion, combined intake silencer and air cleaner, new crankcase ventilating system, improved steering gears, one-piece rear axle housing, new clutches and four-point rubber insulated engine mountings.

PACKARD MOTOR NET DOWN

DETROIT, July 26.—Packard Motor Car Company June quarter net profit was $2,872,175 after charges and taxes, equal to 19 cents a share on 15,000,000 shares of capital stock, against $7,560,-530 or 50 cents a share in the June, 1929, quarter.

Six months net profit totals $5,526,422 after above charges, equal to 36 cents a share, comparing with $14,675,141 or 97 cents a share in the first half of 1929. Cash on hand as of June 30 was $17,700,000.

Northwest Contrasts Enterprise With Pessimism Of East

By B. C. FORBES

IN THE WEST, July 26.

When you travel in the Pacific Northwest you hear much about timber. On this trip I have been especially impressed. As I told one audience by the timber of the citizens throughout Western Canada, Washington, Oregon, the people are going about their business normally, rationally, neither talking nor acting as pessimistically as many Eastern individuals and organizations. It is a relief to be here, away from the hourly gyrations of the stock market, meeting representative business men in different cities and seeing so many signs of enterprise and growth.

Mr. Forbes

ON SUCH TRIPS I never hesitate to respond to requests for advice because, as you know, it costs nothing and is some one told me the only thing a native-born Scot ever freely gives. The lumbermen talked over their difficulties. As with other industries, the bane of this industry is gross overproduction and the consequent dumping on the market of more than it can or will absorb at a fair price. Obviously the remedy need is for output in line with consumption, for production kept within measurable distance of actual demand. Whenever you suggest co-operative activity on the part of the industry's ablest giants "Washington" is whispered in awe.

At this moment Washington from President Hoover down, is much more concerned about hastening the return of prosperity, than about pitching into jail fillers of pay envelopes sincerely anxious to take honest steps to reduce unemployment. I have reminded the lumber industry of what has been done by oil producers. Oil is quite as complicated, farflung, widely-owned as the lumber industry. Oil's troubles were equally acute.

A remedy was equally impossible—apparently. Yet very substantial progress has been made in modifying the overproduction of oil all over the land.

Chief producers have shown a profit of teamwork, and although the situation, alike in producing, refining and distributing, is still very, very far from ideal, nevertheless co-operation has achieved invaluable results. Lumber leaders, by getting together in the right frame of mind, surely could do something to check the ruinous waste now raging. Let them take Washington into their complete confidence, as did the oil men. Washington office holders have no irrepressible desire to do anything calculated to incite a political upheaval this fall or in 1932.

They are in a chastened mood, ready to listen to reason. Lumber is too priceless a national asset to be criminally wasted. Let its custodians bestir themselves.

Practically half the standing timber of the United States is in the four states of the Pacific Northwest. Washington and Oregon each has more than a quarter of a trillion board feet. These statistics are enough to make your head swim and your tongue stick out.

Washington has approximately 740 sawmills and woodworking plants, employing over 60,000 workers and producing $270,000,000 worth west of the Cascades. Douglass fir predominates, supplying fully half the total. East of the Cascades, yellow pine leads. But a rich variety of other species abounds.

"Douglass fir," says the Seattle Chamber of Commerce, "is used successfully for more purposes than any other wood in the world—from battery separator, only a fraction of an inch thick, to huge timbers. It grows faster and reproduces itself more readily than any other United States wood. It's stronger for its weight than any other resinous wood.

"Structural Douglass fir has 30 per cent greater tensile strength for its weight than steel."

What a pity that the principal industry of this northwestern empire should be so lacking in business statesmanship that year after year it has been wallowing in profitless, wasteful overproduction.

Gentlemen, prove you possess leadership qualities by exercising leadership qualities. Any fool can do the easy thing. Show your mettle by tackling and achieving the apparently impossible.

PRICE CUTTING VIEWED AS HARMFUL

Vendors' Refusal to Shade Prices Would Aid Trade Pickup, Steel Head Says

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER.

(Copyright 1930, Universal Service, Inc.)

NEW YORK, July 26.—The return of prosperity would be quickened if vendors would decline to take orders at prices which yield no profit, according to E. J. Kulas, independent steel executive, president of the Otis Steel Company and the Midland Steel Products Company.

Mr. Kulas writes:

"Buyers are hunting for bargains and sellers are cutting into or below the profit line to produce them.

Mr. Rukeyser

The special price and the private deal—which is public property a few hours after it is made—are being substituted for published daily quotations and business in the open. Stability and confidence naturally give way to fluctuation and distrust, and the orderly flow of commerce that looks always to expansion is halted by a hit-or-miss system in which restriction becomes inevitable.

"Undoubtedly the desire of the buyer to get low prices is the first link in the chain of events that leads to unprofitable business, but that desire exists also in busy or boom times. It is essential to the economic conduct of business. But what is equally essential is that the seller should set up a resistance. There should be a line below which he will not go. In order to establish such a line, however, the vendor must know his costs instead of guessing at them. When he does know them with any degree of accuracy, he is likely also to have a fair line on what it is costing his competitors to do business, and when a fictitious price is suggested to him he knows it cannot produce a profit.

"The vendor, in other words, is chiefly responsible, in my opinion, for a great deal of the present instability of industry. I do n. mean by this that the buyer is justified in beating prices below the profit level. The point is that his only source of information as to where that level lies is among firms that are competing for his business. A few really shrewd buyers will avoid bargain hunting and make their own investigations of what an article ought to cost. But the majority of them will react to the attitude of the seller, and it is my conviction that we are not going to have normal business in this country until all manufacturers make a real analysis of their costs and a determined stand thereon."

RUSSIAN TRADE

The heresy hunting congressional committee, which has been hearing tales about the Amtorg Trading Corporation, has emphasized the growing volume of the trade with Russia. In a sense, the trade, running over $100,000 a year in exports, is bootlegged, for the State Department has withheld recognition of the Soviet government. In view of the willingness of certain large Wall street banks and numerous outstanding American industrial corporations and technical experts to deal with Russia, the question arises why America does not recognize Russia. The answer is political, rather than economic. Curiously enough, a labor body, the American Federation of Labor, seems more violently antagonistic toward the Soviet than capitalistic Wall street. Perhaps Wall street is more hard boiled and is thinking in terms of profits. Meantime, with exports shrinking, it is to be hoped that squeamishness will not deprive the country of such business with Russia as can be legitimately carried on. Absence of Russia and China from normal participation in the world market is one of the underlying causes of the world trade depression.

Of course, not all institutions feel the same about Russia. The Soviet used to keep substantial deposits at the Guaranty Trust Company. A few years ago, the representatives of the Soviet sought to open up credits at the bank. William C. Potter, able president of the Guaranty, it is understood, politely told the Soviet representatives that since their country had a different attitude toward property and contracts he did not see how they could do business together. Accordingly, the Russian funds were withdrawn from the Guaranty and taken to two other Wall street banks.

$100,000,000 FORTUNE

The passing of next to the last of the Wendell family focusses attention on a great real estate fortune that has been built up in New York over two centuries. The estate is said to be worth $100,000,000. The formula of success of the family was to acquire choice New York real estate and never let it go. Not bad advice. However mere compound interest over 200 years is a powerful factor. Money invested in 6 per cent bonds, on which the interest is promptly reinvested, doubles in less than 12 years.

Of course, the marked credit easement reflects fundamental factors, but the celerity with which interest rates fell in the last eight months indicates the effect of the Federal Reserve policy, which has attempted to mitigate the ill effects of depression. In eight months these factors stimulated credit ease: Purchase by the Reserve banks of $440,000,000 of government securities; a return flow of $325,000,000 of currency to the banks, and an increase of $145,000,000 of the monetary gold stock.

The present extreme ease reflects in part lack of demand, and interest rates may be expected to rise somewhat when business becomes more active.

Municipal Bond Sales Show Gain

Sales of state and municipal bonds for the first six months of 1930 totaled $754,998,379.

This figure compares with $670,383,755 for the corresponding period of 1929; with $778,419,445 for the first six months of 1928; with $882,820,720 for the first half of the year 1927, and $748,986,936 for the first six months of 1926.

TEXAS RIVALS FACE PRIMARY

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., July 26.—(Universal.)—Eleven husky-voiced candidates for the Texas Democratic gubernatorial nomination today were awaiting the decision of the primaries.

All of the candidates, in last-minute speeches, predicted their nomination by good majorities. However, as the polls opened, only three of the candidates stand out as real contenders for the toga now worn by Dan Moody.

They are Senator Tom Love, of Dallas; Ross Sterling, of Houston, and former Gov. "Ma" Ferguson, whose campaign was conducted by her husband, Jim Ferguson, a former governor.

Two of these three are almost certain to go into the runoff. Political observers agree "Ma" will get into it, and that the real race of the primary will be between Love and Sterling, with the odds slightly in favor of the Houston oil man.

FIRE IN PLANT FATAL TO MAN

One man was dead today following fire last night in the Standard Sanitary Manufacturing Company, 2801 Preble avenue, Woods Run, which caused damage estimated at $5,000, and which resulted in two alarms being sounded.

James Bulik, 54, of 1140 Goettman street, a watchman, died in St. John's Hospital, where he was taken after he collapsed near the building. Death was caused by excitement, according to the coroner's report.

An overheated stack in the enameling storehouse caused the fire, police said. Dense smoke, which filled the building, hampered firemen.

Scores of persons from the lower North Side district were attracted by the smoke. After the second alarm was sounded, an emergency hospital was established by Police and Fire Surgeon D. E. Sable.

SUSPECT HELD, GEMS FOUND

Mt. Lebanon police today were attempting to identify stolen jewelry, found, they said, when they arrested Frank Lawson, alias Frank J. Taylor, 45, of 280 Shady avenue.

He confessed to several robberies in Mt. Lebanon and in one city, police said. He was arrested near the home of Mrs. Wray Dudley, of 228 Pennsylvania boulevard, Mt. Lebanon after she complained that he had been acting suspiciously.

Among those who will view Lawson and the jewels police have recovered are C. H. Stolzenbach, Jr., of 37 LeMoyne avenue, Mt. Lebanon, and John K. Nuttall, of 4000 Brighton road, whose homes he said he burglarized, according to police.

Police recovered rings, precious stones, necklaces, a revolver, a fur neckpiece and a camera, valued at more than $500, they said.

Babst Says Sugar Price at Low Level

Earl D. Babst, chairman of the American Sugar Refining Company, before sailing to Europe, said:

"Sugar prices generally are about as low as they can go and as to the immediate prospects for improvement, I won't predict at this time."

In regard to the suggestion, that as the result of the recently enacted tariff legislation, Cuban sugar interests might find it more profitable to refine the product in Cuba, thus competing in the American market with refining companies, Mr. Babst said that it was a possibility, though he did not know whether it is being seriously contemplated or not.

Trouble turns up as an unexpected traveling companion as The Jameses and their neighbors embark on a vacation jaunt. Charlie, the young son of the family, is particularly jubilant when the Jameses leave for Iron Springs, because the school-mate, who is the object of Chester's first attack of "puppy love," is also vacationing there with her parents. How Chester's hopes are frustrated by a request from the hotel management that the Jameses leave immediately will be revealed in the dramatic sketch.

Two stirring marches will signal the opening of the General Electric Band program, directed by Arthur Pryor, which will go on the air tonight at 9:30 o'clock over WCAE. "The Arcade Girl" and "Col. Stuart March," are the two martial tunes, but the program has a distinctly international flavor. "In the Soudan." "Reminiscences of Ireland," a Spanish melody and one from Soviet Russia, certainly offer a variety of style.

Gertrude Rodgers, a Mononghela miss, who recently graduated from the Pennsylvania College for Women, will be heard tonight in several duets in a recital with Robert Pritchard from WCAE at 7 o'clock. While in college Miss Rodgers led the Glee Club and otherwise showed her ability as an entertainer.

KQV introduces a new feature tonight, something to cause people to thrill deliciously and tremble ever so slightly with real concern. The Hollywood Players, under the direction of Gene Homer Griffith, will present two mystery stories, "The Haunted House of Kildare" and "The Birthday Murder Mystery." There will be shots, groans, screams, sobs, howls and more shots to give these sketches atmosphere. The first one starts at 10 o'clock.

These hottish days mean nothing to members of the WJAS studio. They are just so athletic they are issuing challenges to right and left. Yesterday they decided they were so good at mushball a challenge was promptly sent out, far and near, offering to play any nine-man team from any other broadcasting station. Are there any Jai Alai or pelota teams in studios hereabouts?

* * *

The overture to "William Tell," Rossini's masterpiece and last opera, will be one of the classical selections to be played by the Goldman Band during the broadcast from the New York University campus tonight. Station KDKA will send out this program at 8:30 o'clock.

Tony Lombardo, of the popular team of Jack and Tony, a KQV feature, announces a split with Jack Banky and says he will play with an orchestra at the Pines commencing Wednesday. He certainly squeezes sweet melody from that accordion, Jack, however, is still on the Blues Chasers program in the mornings with Paul Fleeger, and guest artists for that program are expected to be announced shortly.

This may be so.

A woman in Auburn, N. Y., learning that her daughter's apartment house was on fire, dashed over to see about it. The fire was out, but six firemen were lined up in the hall, still holding dripping hose and axes and other paraphernalia, listening to Amos 'n' Andy on the radio. Witnesses said the firemen wouldn't have worked harder to put out that fire if it had been the Auburn Chess and Checker Club burning.

CURTISS BURIAL RITES SIMPLE

HAMMONDSPORT, N. Y., July 26.—(AP.)—With the simplest of services, Glenn Hammond Curtiss was laid to rest in Pleasant Valley Cemetery, only a few hundred feet from the scene of the labors and triumphs which earned the world-renowned pioneer airman the title of "the Father of Aviation."

Every business activity in this village was halted while associates and friends from far and near thronged the Curtiss residence to join with his neighbors in their last tribute.

The Rev. Grant P. Sommerville, rector of St. James Episcopal Church here, officiated at the simple rites in the Curtiss home, after which the body was borne to its place in the family plot.

Among the hundreds of messages of condolence and sympathy were telegrams from Col. Charles A. Lindbergh and Mrs. Anne Morrow Lindbergh, and from Rear Admiral Richard Evelyn Byrd.

30,000 MOURN FOR BUCKLEY

DETROIT, July 26.—(INS.)—Preparations were completed for the burial today of Gerald E. Buckley, campaigning radio announcer, who was murdered in the lobby of the La Salle Hotel election night by three gunmen.

The esteeem in which Buckley was held by thousands of Detroiters was evidenced in the constant pilgrimage of mourners by his casket in his home.

It was estimated more than 30,000 persons called to pay their respects to the man whose epitaph was expressed by many in the words:

Populace Clamors For Official's $3,500

MIDDLETOWN, Conn.—(INS.)—John S. Roth, tax assessor here, thought he was doing the city a good turn when he resigned his position with the statement he was ashamed to take $3,500 for a year's salary when he worked barely six months.

Within 24 hours Roth was flooded with letters from distant points asking him for a share in his salary, and now he has his doubts about the wisdom of making his resignation public.

HORSE TRAFFIC BAN OPPOSED

Through co-operation in timing deliveries, a complete ban on horse-drawn vehicles on the boulevards and in the Liberty tubes might not be necessary, W. J. Moore, chairman of the trucking and delivery sub-committee of the Better Traffic Committee, announced. The announcement was made after tabulation of the questionnaires sent to all horse-drawn vehicle operators.

Comments from over 50 operators, using a total of 562 horses, show that while a total ban on horse-drawn vehicles would not be acceptable to them, they are willing to co-operate by refraining from using the streets during peak hours.

Col. Groome has been confined to his bed for several weeks, with physicians in daily attendance. He is 68 years old.

In our opinion the purchaser of a used car is interested primarily in transportation. It is important that he knows the capabilities of a used car before he buys it.

A thorough knowledge of the condition of a car is necessary before any estimate can be placed on its future performance. As this knowledge can be obtained only through long experience, we believe ourselves qualified to gauge the potential mileage left in a used car.

DISCUSSES OUTLOOK FOR STADIUM

FRED TURBYVILLE

This column's guest conductor for today. He is the new editor of the Pitt Stadium Press Service and a veteran newspaper sports editor. Take a good look at him working with his ever-present pipe to give him inspiration, and then become acquainted with the man and his thoughts below.

HIMSELF SUBBING FOR James J. Long, who is on vacation, this writer has asked Fred Turbyville, new editor of the Pitt Stadium Press Service, which has charge of all sports publicity emanating from the Stadium, to be the guest conductor of this column today. As a fellow sports editor with Turby in Baltimore, in 1923 and 1924, this writer came to esteem Fred highly for his ability and thinks the Pittsburgh sports public should be more familiar with the man. That is the reason he has asked Turby to address you with his typewriter today.

Briefly, here is the history of Turbyville: He began writing sports in his high school days at Indianapolis, back in 1908 (figure out his age from that). He has been sports editor of the Indianapolis Star, Indianapolis News, NEA Service and Baltimore Evening Sun. He also has been a sports writer on the Cleveland Press, News and Leader, and served three years with the International News Service, in Boston, New York and Cleveland. Last fall, he broke into the college sports publicity line as director of publicity at Duke University, in North Carolina, which was opening its new stadium. He also has been a publicity man for the International League. In addition to his work at Pitt, he conducts his own sports syndicate service, which supplies 46 newspapers with feature stories and comment and includes a column called "Sports Parade." He has an exceptional eye for news features.

Turbyville comes here from Baltimore, where he made his home for 10 years. I have asked him to write his impressions of Pittsburgh as a sports center, compared with the other cities in which he has labored, and also to write about Pitt football and the Stadium, and anything else of general interest. Now, Mr. Turbyville, in person:

By FRED TURBYVILLE,
EDITOR, PITT STADIUM PRESS SERVICE.
(Written by Request.)

IF I HAD half the money in the world I'd pick out a good newspaper and offer to write a sports column every day without pay.

And, if they turned me down, I'd buy the paper so I could have my wish.

That's telling you how much I like this sort of thing, and how appreciative I am of the opportunity of being today's "guest columnist" in the Sun-Telegraph.

BEEN WRITING COLUMNS for sports pages off and on for 20 years, but this is the first time as a "guest columnist." However, the unexpected pleasure does not catch me without words. There is plenty to say—there always is in the case of a column writer.

As long as the space and the personal pronoun "I" hold out, you will have a column.

If any other column writer happens to read this, I hope he won't count the I's, for column writers don't like I's—in another fellow's column. In this instance, it is almost necessary to use more than a fair allotment, for the sports editor asked for a somewhat personal column.

THE AVERAGE NEWSPAPER man of 20 years or more of service gets around the country a bit, and I am no exception. I have worked in several big towns, but Pittsburgh was rather new to me when I came here this summer.

Frankly, I like it very much, and, if there is any more smoke or dirt here than there is in the average big city, it isn't noticeable to me.

The hills worry me more. Climbing the hill to Pitt Stadium is my chief worry, whether afoot or aboard my more or less ancient vehicle.

But when there is something to climb for it isn't so bad. And the Stadium atop Herron Hill is quite worth the climb.

That Stadium cost a lot of money. I visited a day last week with a man who had much to do with its building, Karl E. Davis. Karl is now in Cleveland, connected with Western Reserve University, which has more students than the University of Pittsburgh. But Karl probably would trade the surplus in students for some of the football talent that Jack Sutherland has to work with this fall.

MANERO TRAILS PACE-SETTER BY STROKE

ANCASTER, Ont., July 26.—(AP.)—Leading professionals from the United States unleashed one attack after another yesterday, but could not dislodge Nicol Thompson, Sr., veteran Canadian pro, from the lead in the Canadian open golf championship.

With half the 72 holes behind him, Thompson, approaching the 50-year mark, led the field by one stroke with a dozen stars from below the border just behind him. The Canadian, shot a consistent round of 71, which with his 66 in the first round gave him a 36-hole total of 137 and the lead by one stroke over Tony Manero, of Elmsford, N. Y., who shot his second 69 in as many days for a total of 138.

Tied for third place at 139 were two more standbys from the United States, Johnny Farrell, of Mamaroneck, N. Y., and Walter Hagen. Farrell produced the most amazing display of golf of the day with a 66, four under par, covering the first nine holes in 31 strokes. Hagen scored 69 for his total of 139.

FRENCH HAS 140

Back of this pair were Al Watrous, of Detroit and Emmet French, of Southern Pines, N. C., with 140. The stars at 141 included George Von Elm of Detroit, who set the pace for the amateurs; Leo Diegel, of Agua Caliente; MacDonald Smith, of New York, and Charles Lacey, of Philadelphia.

The biggest disappointments of the day were Horton Smith, pro at the Cragston, N. Y., Club, and Ed Dudley, of Wilmington, Del. Dudley, who was up among the leaders with a 69, needed 75 today for a 36-hole total of 144, while Smith added a mediocre 73 for a 145 total.

LEHMAN PLAYS COUCH

CHICAGO, July 26.—(AP.)—The Western amateur golf championship was made safe for Chicago yesterday as Johnny Lehman and Ira Couch, two of the Windy City's highest ranking young stars, crowded into the final with surprising triumphs.

Lehman, co-medalist and conqueror yesterday of the defending champion, Don Moe, of Portland, Ore., galloped into the final round with a crushing 8 and 7 defeat of England's last hope, T. Phillip Perkins. Couch, never before a victor in an important tournament outside of Chicago, reached the round by defeating Bob McCrary, the "Fighting Scot" from Des Moines, Ia., 2 and 1.

It was the first time the championship battle ended in an all-Chicago affair since way back in 1912, when Chick Evans and Warren K. Wood fought for the crown over the Denver Country Club course.

WOMEN'S FINAL TODAY

RYE, N. Y., July 26.—(AP.)—Frances Williams, of Bethlehem, Pa., reached the final round of the annual women's invitation golf tournament at the West Chester Country Club yesterday, defeating Martha Parker, of Spring Lake, New Jersey champion, 4 and 2. The Pennsylvania star, Eastern champion, will meet Jane Brooks, of Rockland County, in the 18-hole final today. Mrs. Brooks defeated Mrs. Edward Stevens, of Round Hill, 6 and 4.

Golfer Gets Ace, But Loses Match

HARRISBURG, July 26.—(AP.)—While playing in the Greater Harrisburg golf tournament yesterday, Dr. W. R. Shearer, of the Carlisle Country Club, made a hole in 1 but lost his match, 4 and 2. Dr. Shearer made his ace on the 180-yard eleventh hole.

EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOONS OF YESTERDAY: THE HINDU WITH TWO MOUTHS—This Hindu, who is about 30 years old, has an accessory mouth above the hyoid from which his tongue can be protruded and deglutition performed. Although mastication must be performed by the upper mouth, the man can drink liquids in his second mouth as easily as with his normal one. He never has been ill, is of ordinary intelligence and lives on an ordinary diet. An account of this medical curiosity appeared in a recent issue of the Indian Medical Gazette, and is verified by Dr. A. R. Alexander, 446 Kingston avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y. BEN BURBRIDGE CAUGHT EIGHT GORILLAS WITH HIS BARE HANDS—Burbridge has headed five expedition to Africa making a scientific study of wild animals. On these expeditions he has captured eight gorillas in hand-to-hand struggles, and Prof. Yerkes, of Yale University, gives him credit for being the only white man to catch a live gorilla successfully. Burbidge's book, "Gorilla," is an excellent treatise on its habits and life. He also is the author of many newspaper and magazine articles on that subject and has marketed a moving picture, "Ben Burbidge's Gorilla Hunt." FROM ONE STATE TO ANOTHER OVERNIGHT WITHOUT MOVING—W. J. Schumacher lived on this farm located at the bend in the Missouri River just above Sioux City, Ia. The river is the dividing line between Iowa and South Dakota. NEW YORK, July 26.—Alarmed and disappointed over the pathetic showing of his battle front against left hand pitching, Manager Ens of the Pirates this morning announced he would bench First Baseman Gus Suhr, provided Boss McGraw called on another left-hander for today's game.

The woeful weakness of the Buccos at the plate yesterday as they were subdued, 3 to 1, by Clarence Mitchell, the only spitball left hander of the game, causes Ens to make his contemplated move.

Suhr has been impotent against southpaw pitching and he has not been hitting the right handers consistently. Ens figures that the change may afford Suhr the sort of a rest that will bring him back with his customary power. Gus is batting far below the .300 mark and his performances against the left handers has been pathetic to himself as well as to his chief.

FRENCH LOOKS GOOD

The smart McGraw has four southpaws available for duty and Ens figures he will use at least three of them in the present series. Herb Pruett and Bill Walker are both ready for action in today's game. Ens has no pitcher with sufficient rest to face the Giants, but he will call on Ervin Brame who worked more than four innings in Philadelphia Wednesday.

SUNDAY NIGHT TILT CARDED

WHEELING, W. Va., July 26.—The management of the Wheeling Stogies, of the Middle Atlantic League, announced last night that they would play the first Sunday night baseball game in the history of this section of the country tomorrow, when Fairmont will be met here. Theoretically, Sunday night baseball is against the law in West Virginia, but enforcement of this law rests with county and city authorities, who have thus far made no effort to halt plans for the game.

In yesterday's games Scottdale defeated Wheeling, 11-10; Jeannette beat Clarksburg, 3-2; Cumberland bumped Fairmont, 7-5, and Johnstown was whipped by Charleroi, 14-3.

ROBINS BANK ON THURSTON TO KEEP LEAD

CUBS TRIUMPH AND CROWD FLOCK

By COPELAND C. BURG,
International News Service.

NEW YORK, July 26.—Hollis Thurston, the man nobody knew, probably will be sent against the Cincinnati Reds this afternoon in a desperate effort to prolong the winning drive started by the Brooklyn Robins yesterday when they downed the Rhinelanders, 7 to 2.

Everybody thought Hollis was a hot weinie peddler or Dazzy Vance's personal body guard until he astounded himself and the world last week by shutting out the Cardinals, thereby gaining a formal introduction to Manager Wilbert Robinson. Eppa Rixey probably will be the Reds' mound choice. Yesterday's win, brought about by Ray Moss holding Cincinnati to six hits in as many innings and shutout ball by the Robins' newly acquired Lefty Heimach for two innings after Moss got too kindly with passes in the seventh, halted the Reds after they had grabbed five straight. A tie in games with the flock is the best a victory today would bring.

Taylor, subbing for Stephenson, led the cubs in a batting attack which downed the Phillies, 9 to 5. Taylor got four hits, one a triple.

Home runs by Bishop, Miller and Simmons and two triple steals patterned the massacre of the Indians, 14 to 1, by the Athletics.

Fancy flinging by the somewhat ancient Clarence Mitchell and a homer by Bill Terry that broke a tie in the third inning was enough to hand it to the Giants, 3 to 1, over Pittsburgh. The Pirates drew only seven hits.

With the bags bogged in the ninth, Berger singled to score Richbourg, winning for Boston, 5 to 4, over the St. Louis Cardinals.

Lou Gehrig homered and got two other bingle bangles while the Tigers registered seven errors—result: New York 14, Detroit 7.

Carl Reynolds, who is playing great ball for the White Sox, doubled to right center, scoring Mulleavy from first to win in the ninth, 6 to 5, for Chicago over Washington.

The Brownies managed to keep out of the cellar for another day, ing the Ruddy Sox, 6 to 3, as e Goslin got a four-base clout, uble and a single, driving in counters.

Stowe Noses Out Dormont Nine, 10-9

Interesting contests marked yesterday's sandlot league battles. Carnegie Steel bumped B. & O., 7-6, in the C. & I. loop, while Stowe beat Dormont, 10-9. Book Shoe tripped Homewood, 6-3, and North Side Civics topped Pleasant Valley, 6-5, in the City loop.

...dead Aces won from ..., 7-6, and Jenkins ..., 3-1, in the Greater ...hile Railways top-pled Equitable, 7-5, in the Philadelphia Company circuit.

Ingram won over St. Phillips, 2-1, in the Crafton Church League and Fintex copped from the Soho Traders, 16-7, in the Central. The Crawfords defeated Ingomar, 21-0, in a benefit contest.

Keck's Sport Comment

money, and Karl told me some of the difficulties encountered, the chief one being the fact that an old coal mine, which had burned for years, offered some resistance to the engineers.

Pitt Stadium cost something like two millions, I was told. To pay for it requires big football crowds.

About 5 per cent of the total paid attendance in one of the big modern football stadia represents the student body. And I'd guess that about 45 per cent of the crowd are old college graduates with their wives and sweethearts. The other 50 per cent probably has been attracted to football in the last few years because it is a spectacle worth seeing.

FOOTBALL IS MY favorite sport, and always has been. This is the first time I've had a personal interest in it, though I did play some back in the days when they were experimenting with forward passes and lobbing the ball about.

Glenn Thistlethwaite, now at Wisconsin, was breaking in as a coach at Earlham College in 1909 when I showed up there as a quarterback.

I weighed 165 pounds. Another candidate, Bill Connelly, weighed 130, and the little fellow always got the edge in those days as quarterback. And, besides, Thistlethwaite needed the extra 35 pounds elsewhere. I went to half.

This same Bill Connelly transferred to Pitt and was a quarterback here a couple of years. He's William J. Connelly, attorney in the Frick Building, and when he goes home in the evening he has to climb a pretty high hill up north of Millvale. I've been up that hill a few times, too, and IT'S ANOTHER HILL WORTH CLIMBING.

FOOTBALL HAS CHANGED a lot since those days of 5,000 crowds. They have learned to throw the forward pass and the quarterback is just another back. The crowds run to 75,000 and 80,000—and more.

I understand the fellow who wrote "It Ain't Goin' to Rain No More" was an optimist who went sort of balmy waiting for a bright sunny day for a game in the new Pitt Stadium.

Tech, I understand, has had some luck with the weather, but Pitt's luck is yet to come. Maybe 1930 is the lucky year.

The Notre Dame game should fill the Stadium. If Tech and Pitt win a lot of games, they also may fill it. The two teams have good schedules, providing continuous major football attractions for Stadium fans.

Pittsburgh is fortunate to have so much good football. A lot of other big cities would like it—New York, Chicago, Cleveland, Baltimore, Detroit, Washington, etc.

BETWEEN PITT AND Tech, the biggest teams in the country are being attracted to this city.

Next year comes Army to play the Panthers.

I WAS PRETTY well informed on Pittsburgh before coming here. One of the town's best boosters no doubt is Jimmy DeHart, who used to drill you football fans as the Panther quarterback. I had the pleasure of a three months' association with Jimmy down at Duke University.

If one got all his dope from Jimmy he'd just about feel that the best football in the country was played by Pitt, that Pop Warner was the greatest of all football teachers, that the Pitt Stadium was the best in the land, and that Pittsburgh, next to his native Wilkinsburg, was the world's most desirable habitat.

A LOT OF that isn't hard to believe.

To my mind, the Panthers that day were greater than Illinois with Grange, than Ohio with Harley, than Notre Dame with the Four Horsemen, than Michigan with Friedman and Oosterbaan.

Pitt was right that day, POINTED TO DUKE, the second game on its schedule. That sounds peculiar, but it's true.

DeHart had coaxed Sutherland into bringing the Panthers down to dedicate Duke's stadium, the biggest and finest in the South. Jock thought Jimmy was "laying" for him with a world-beating team. Perhaps Jimmy had that idea in mind.

The result was a disaster.

That game ruined Duke's football year. DeHart was crestfallen. Sutherland was little short of the same. When he saw Uansa and Williams running wild he yanked them out and sent in reserves.

Twice he did this during the afternoon, but the Panther reserves were pointed, too. There was no stopping them.

Jimmy DeHart.

FOR ONCE HERE was a coach who actually wanted to slow his team down to save an old teammate from the humiliation of being snowed under in what should have been his hour of triumph—the dedication of the stadium he had built by several seasons of hard coaching.

But the Panthers couldn't be stopped. The two saddest men in Durham, N. C., that night were DeHart and Sutherland, and I was a close third.

JIMMY WAS SORELY disappointed, but not vindictive. He bore no grudge. This little fellow is one of the finest characters I have known.

THAT'S ALL IN the past. Another football season is ahead. Pitt lost some of the men who scintillated in the new Duke Stadium that afternoon, but I see a lot of them left on this year's roster.

LAST FALL, EVERY football fan in the Eastern half of the U. S. A., wanted to see Pitt and Notre Dame clash. A game was impossible. But one was arranged for this year. Of the two great teams of 1929, Notre Dame probably lost more by graduation than Pitt. But no one is expecting a weak team from South Bend. By the same line of reasoning, Pitt may be figured a very formidable team this fall.

PITTSBURGH IS "BIG league" in every respect.

Pitt and Tech in football are known to every follower of the game. Duquesne by no means is an unknown.

No college basketball team ever has had the national reputation of Charley Hyatt and his Panther mates.

The Pirates are having an off year, the first I recall in a long time. Hard luck, I'd say, without looking further.

I've been over the Oakmont golf course a few times and can understand why it rates as one of the world's best. A lot of great golfers have carried Pittsburgh's banner. And you have the Bobby Jones of the public links in Carl Kauffmann.

I can remember some great ringmen of this town. I'd like to see another battle between Frank Klaus and Jack Dillon. Dillon's home was my home, Indianapolis, but he fought here so often you old fans must thought he was living here.

Followed Harry Greb, the Zivic boys, and many others. Pittsburgh is rich in fistic lore.

YOU HAVE SOMETHING else a lot of big cities would like to have, a big league hockey franchise. I hope it stays here. It's a great game.

I don't know of any city that has more amateur sports or better facilities. Or more encouragement than is given by the Pittsburgh papers.

SUMMING IT UP, I'd say that Pittsburgh is sitting on top of the sports world. I left a pretty good town to come here when I ended a 10 years' stay in Baltimore this summer. But there was an inducement. Work that is chiefly in football is very attractive here because I regard Pittsburgh as the best football center in the country.

I thank you!

(Editor's Note: And I thank you, Turby, old top, and am sure the readers feel the same way about it.)

17 ARE NAMED FOR BIG RACE AT ARLINGTON

CHICAGO, July 26.—(AP.)—A field of 17 outstanding handicap horses, but with no great stars among them, were named last night for the $45,000 Arlington Handicap at a mile and a quarter today. It will be the second richest stake of the Arlington meeting and if all 17 go to the post, the gross value will be $48,450.

Twelve of the 17 are regarded as certain starters and there may be as many as 15. The 17 listed in the entries are: Stars and Bars, Jean Valjean, Pigeon Hole, Sun Beau, High Foot, My Dandy, Sandy Ford, Lady Broadcast, Paul Bunyan, Toro, Lucky Play, Curate, Brown Wisdom, William T., Hot Toddy, The Nut and Easter Stockings.

Missing from the competition will be Gallant Fox, Gallant Knight, Blue Larkspur, Misstep and Victorian, one of the biggest money winners of all time. Misstep and Victorian are ailing with bad legs, Toro is regarded as a doubtful starter due to lameness.

Although the field may not be the most brilliant of the year, it is one of the biggest to start in any valuable handicap this season. The 5-year-old Sun Beau, owned by Willis Sharpe Kilmer, Binghamton, N. Y., ruled the favorite, while the 4-year-old Curate, the entry of Joseph E. Widener, of New York, also is strongly regarded. If Sun Beau is victorious, he will enter the list of the 10 greatest money winners of all time. The easterner will carry top weight of 125 pounds, but he is used to that and a mile and a quarter is regarded as his best distance.

CHARLES WOLFF REGIS WOLFF

REGIS WOLFF COPS JUNIOR GOLF TITLE

By VERN SWARTSFAGER.

Regis Wolff, 18-year-old Oliver High School star, again sent the colors of the Highland Country Club flying high when he defeated Wilson F. (Billy) Marks, 16-year-old Kiski lad, and medalist, 5 and 4, to win the Percy H. Preston Memorial trophy, emblematic of the Western Pennsylvania Junior Golf championship, in the title play held under the auspices of the Western Pennsylvania Golf Association brought to a close at the Westmoreland Country Club yesterday.

While Marks had ranked an outstanding favorite to cop the gonfalon this year, he reached his edge too quickly in the tourney in copping medal honors, and was not playing his best game when the finale was reached. But that fact does not detract one iota from the splendid victory attained by Wolff, who was sinking putts from all over the course, and who would have beaten many a greater star than Marks in top form the way he played yesterday afternoon.

WINS FIVE IN ROW

Through to the seventh hole, after Marks had taken a quick lead by copping the first two holes, and had then been leveled and down one, they played nip-and-tuck golf—but from that point on it was all Wolff and nothing else but. As soon as Regis became 1 up at the seventh, he won five holes in a row, which was enough to upset the morale of any golfer. Whereas Wolff appeared quite collected and played steadily, Marks became more or less ruffled and did not give the greatest value to his stroking.

Wolff was hitting an admirable ball from the tee, outdriving his more husky although younger opponent. His irons were true to the player and his putting was something at which to marvel—he just up and tapped 'em in from 10 feet without paying much attention to line. At the end of the first nine, Wolff had 38 strokes to Marks' 41, and Regis was 3 up. The champ was three over 4s for the 14 holes.

Wolff had eliminated W. W. Long, of New Castle, 1 up, and Marks had disposed of Tom Vantacky, of Titusville, 4 and 3, in penultimate matches.

J. Bernd Rose, president of the W. P. G. A., presented Wolff the Preston Trophy after his victory, George A. Ormiston, secretary, assisting in the ceremonies.

MRS. GARBER WINS

Mrs. D. A. Garber, of Stanton Heights, won in the first division in the one-day medal play women's tourney at the Edgewood Country Club, she having a score of 83-11—72, which gave her low net as well as low gross. Mrs. C. W. Harding, of Edgewood, was second with 90-13—77. Mrs. L. D. Neuman copped in the second flight with 90-17—73 and Mrs. W. C. Maxwell won in the third with 100-28—72.

Jock Sutherland Home From Europe

NEW YORK, July 26.—Dr. John B. Sutherland, football coach at the University of Pittsburgh, who also teaches in the dental surgery department of that college, returned from Europe last evening in the S. S. California of the Anchor Line.

When interviewed at the pier by a representative of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, Dr. Sutherland said that he was impressed chiefly by the sportsmanship displayed by the teams abroad.

Dr. Sutherland left yesterday for Pittsburgh where he will start football coaching at the university next Monday.

Metro Turf Court Play Near Final

NEW YORK, July 26.—(AP.)—Three New Yorkers and Ellsworth Vines, of Pasadena, Cal., gained the semi-final round of singles in the Metropolitan Turf Court tennis championships yesterday.

Vines eliminated William Einsman of New York, 6-4, 6-3, while Frank Shields put out Davey Jones, tall Columbia University star, 6-2, 6-3. Frank Hunter, of New Rochelle, pounded out a 6-4, 7-5 victory over Donald Cram, of Nashville, Tenn., and Eddie Burns defeated William Feibleman, of New York, 6-2, 6-3.

champion as he held the Giants to two runs and eight hits in seven rounds in the second game of the series, but in view of the perforated drive of the Buccaneer band, French had to pitch shutout ball to win. The only run made by the Pirates was the result of a grounder played poorly by Shortstop Eddie Marshall, who is subbing for the injured Travis Jackson.

French made only one mistake all afternoon, according to his clubmates. The aggressive Native Son let one ball get away from him and Bill Terry smacked the high pitch into the right field stands for a homer that decided the game.

One mistaken pitch in this park will often decide a close ball game. Larry tried to get the ball lower, the offering was around Bill's letters and the hard-hitter rifled a liner into the stands.

MITCHELL HAS CONTROL

If Mitchell were pitching inside a glass house he could not have pitched his way out from the standpoint of speed. But what Mitchell lacked in power he more than made up in control and pitching intelligence. Most of his offerings in pinches were spitballs that gracefully dipped as the Bucs bounced weak taps on the grass. Moreover, the wily patriarch of the sport had perfect control—he did not walk a batter.

Singles by Allen, Lindstrom and Ott gave the Giants a run in the first inning. The Bucco tied it up in the third. Hemsley opened with an infield hit and French sacrificed. L. Waner then hit a roller through Marshall that Hemsley sprinted over.

Brother Paul followed Lloyd with a single to right and both runners advanced as Grantham was thrown out. Mitchell made Comorosky hit a bounder in the dirt in the crisis and from that moment the old time southpaw was the master of the situation.

Terry's homer came in the third with two out. French then pitched shutout innings until he left the scene in the eighth. Flagstead batted for him. With Spencer pitching the eighth, the Giants added a safety run on Terry's double and Grantham's fumble.

FINAL MATCHES

PROGRAM FOR TODAY

1:30 p. m.—Women's singles final round—Mrs. Jean Artzberger, Olympia, vs. Letitia Schmidt, Schenley.

2:30 p. m.—Men's Singles final round—Frank Broida, Frick, vs. Irvin Goodman, Schenley.

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN.

Frank Boida, slender little Harvard southpaw ace and captor of the Frick Park title, will meet Irvin Goodman, spectacular University of Pittsburgh youth and Schenley premier, on the highly manicured Frick gallery court at 2:30 p. m. today in final battle of the Inter-Park elimination series for the Pittsburgh Public Parks men's singles tennis championship. An hour earlier, in the same area, Mrs. Jean Artzberger, clever Olympia winner, is slated to encounter Letitia Schmidt, dark-horse Schenley star, for corresponding laurels in the women's division. The two contests, looming auspiciously as truly outstanding exhibitions of the racquet pastime, will bring to brilliant climax two weeks of sparkling net sport on six local park lots in the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph revival of Steel City municipal tournament competition and will narrow down to the two parks victors a record field originally numbering 169 entrants.

TO AWARD PRIZES

Following immediately upon completion of the titular tilting, Superintendent of Parks James Moore and National Public Parks Tennis Committeeman David I. McCahill will preside at formal presentation of the handsome new Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph Public Parks Challenge Cups for men's and women's singles and will bestow upon champions and runners-up in both Inter-Park eliminations and individual park tourneys medallions of gold and silver and other trophies appropriate to the recipients' accomplishments in the various events. The Challenge Cups will not go outright to the 1930 titleholders, but must be annexed three times, not necessarily in succession, for the garnering of unqualified ownership. Solid gold medals, suitably inscribed, will be the permanent souvenirs for today's survivors. In addition to award of these tokens, the triumphant racqueeters will be sent as Pittsburgh representatives and Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph guests to the National Public Parks championships at Washington, D. C., the week of August 18, so that all in all the landing of a Pittsburgh Parks crown is an objective well worth striving for.

Broida, fresh from Philadelphia, where he had fought his way to the quarter-finals of the Pennsylvania State Junior singles conclave earlier in the week, was pushed to the limit to overcome slim Jack Redmond, Highland flash and Pittsburgh City High School champ, last evening in semi-final combat in the Frick enclosure, 2-6, 6-3, 7-5, 6-2. Meanwhile, on an adjoining restangle, Goodman was carving out impressive 6-2, 6-1, 6-3 penultimate victory over rangy Jack Herrmann, extremely promising youngster who topped off a successful campaign with the Shady Side Academy net squad by stepping in to snare Riverview Park honors. Miss Schmidt disposed of Anne Elise Searing, Wellesley graduate and Frick luminary, 8-6, 6-1, in a hotly skirmished mid-afternoon affair and Mrs. Artzberger accounted for Mildred Klages, West contender, 6-2, 6-1, as the masculine performers were adjusting their differences during the sunset period.

BROIDA NERVOUS

Redmond opened remarkably well in all-portside duel with Broida, the latter appearing nervous and wobbly in the face of the Highlander's unexpectedly severe attack. Broida pulled out service after being down at love-40 in the initial game, but dropped Redmond's delivery in the second and blew his own at 30-40 in the third. Three double faults by Redmond in game four squared the going at 2-2, whereupon the East End lad dug in with slashing service and baseline steadiness to run four consecutive games for the set.

Five games went with service to inaugurate set two, Broida taking the odd one each time by virtue of prior delivery. With Redmond serving in the sixth, two double faults slipped Broida a love-30 lead. Broida netted, and Redmond drove for clean placement and 30-all, but it was 30-40 as Broida stowed the next point away and 'twas game and consolidated advantage for the Frick youngster when Redmond outed a volley for 4-2. The ensuing trio of games saw delivery prevalent, with the result that the lone break of Redmond's service was sufficient to grant Broida the set, 6-3.

REDMOND BLOWS UP

Redmond soared sky-high to start stanza three. He blew service at love at the outset and, after Broida had copped his own game, double-faulted thrice to hand the Crimson kid a 3-0 margin. Here, figured the gallery—and it was quite a large one—would be the end of Redmond. But not at all! Broida failed to stand prosperity, and the Highland entry, spurting gallantly, whisked up to 3-2.

The summary:

MEN'S SINGLES

Semi-final round—Frank Broida, Frick, defeated Jack Redmond, Highland, 2-6, 6-3, 7-5, 6-2; Irvin Goodman, Schenley, defeated Jack Herrmann, Riverview, 6-2, 6-1, 6-3.

Battling bitterly for position, the champion Edgewood team and its ancient foe, the P. A. A., will square off this afternoon in a Pittsburgh Tennis Association Inter-Club League combat that looms as the premier squad event of the local 1930 campaign. With Edgewood leading the Section I group and the Winged Head array pressing the second-place Mount Lebanon outfit for the runner-up notch and a chance at the top position, both combines will present full strength—which means that the very cream of Western Pennsylvania court talent will fight it out for supremacy.

Edgewood's announced lineup for the fray includes the names of Paul Hicks, Sam Harbison, McCook Reed, Capt. Frank Smith, Andy Smeaton and Chuck Boyd. This host, drawn from the varsity hosts of Princeton, Yale, Pitt, Duquesne and Wash-Jeff, will encounter a Red-and-Gray battalion comprised of the three scintillant O'Loughlins—Capt. Dave, John and Billy, Wally Arensberg, Al Bialas, Art Glaser and Jack Lauler.

The contest will be run off partly at P. A. A. and partly at Edgewood, with the No. 1 doubles debate, featuring the West Penn doubles champs, Reed and Hicks, against John and Dave O'Loughlin, transferred to the Frick Park gallery rectangle as part of the final program of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph revival of the Pittsburgh public parks championships.

Another friendly grudge tussle on the Section I card sends Neal Rumsey's Mt. Lebanon contingent to the bailiwick of Jim Creighton's South Hillsmen, while College Hill is certain to offer strong front in invading Stanton Heights and University Club will seek to rise from the seventh step on the ladder at the expense of the visiting Westinghouse delegation.

In Section II, the flying Westinghouse Second crew looks good to care for Minnetonka at Westinghouse, while the runner-up Duquesne Librarians should do as much in entertaining Edgewood Seconds. Canonsburg faces a tough proposition in traveling to Washington Heights, but Alpha Kappa Psi and West Penn Power appear evenly matched, with the cellar the prize for the Power lot loser.

JULY 26, 1930

The Sun-Telegraph Office Will Be Open Until Midnight Tonight for the Convenience of Contestants

Movietest Office, 612 Grant St., open until 5:30 P. M. Today. After that hour, Until Midnight, Come to Sun-Telegraph Office, Third Floor, Bigelow Blvd. and Tunnel St.

A Message:

To Those Who Do Not Have the Details of This Contest

So goes the old proverb—as old as the hills, and as true as the heart of manhood.

How true that is of the present opportunity offered to you by The Sun-Telegraph.

In this day and time, when so many people have so many various needs, is it quite fair to pass up an opportunity to use your common sense and skill in order to provide things that will bring happiness to those you love?

If this message were to be limited to wealthy people, the writer would end this message here. The people this writer wants to reach are the mothers who stand with their babies at each hand, waiting for street cars, the people who are trying to stretch a small salary to cover installment payments, doctor bills and a movie once in a while; the bread-winners who are out of jobs—THOSE ARE THE PEOPLE THIS WRITER WANTS TO REACH. Because he wants to tell them that The Sun-Telegraph is making it possible through this contest for them to win as much as $1,500 in cash.

And what amazes this writer is: "WHY DON'T THESE PEOPLE TRY? WHY DON'T THEY GIVE THEMSELVES A CHANCE TO WIN? WHY DON'T THEY GET IN THIS CONTEST? We can understand why rich people don't enter. "But what about others? THIS SHOULD BE THEIR GOLDEN OPPORTUNITY.

But don't wait until midnight, because in order to win you must provide either one or two subscriptions, and that may require time.

However, in the case of this $5,000 contest, the rules specify that tonight at midnight the contest shall be closed to the public.

If $1,500 in Cash Prizes, or any part of the $5,000 in cash prizes, MEANS ANYTHING TO YOU—try to get your share—try to cash in on this opportunity—and do it by MIDNIGHT TONIGHT.

The Easiest Subscription Requirement Ever

For instance, twenty-five prizes, headed by a $500 Cash Prize, and totaling over $1,700, are offered under conditions that require only one new six-month subscription to the Sun-Telegraph.

Another twenty-five prizes, headed by a $1,000 Cash Prize, are offered under conditions that require two new six-month subscriptions to the Sun-Telegraph.

Here Is the Last Cartoon

The contest closes tonight at midnight, and answers accompanied by the qualifying subscriptions must be in the office of the Sun-Telegraph or in the mail bearing a postmark no later than midnight, July 26th.

CARTOON No. 30

TITLE .....

The correct title for Cartoon No. 30 can be found in this list: "Just Around the Corner;" "Jack and the Bean Stalk;" "Men Without Women;" "La Boheme;" "Paddy, the Next Best Thing;" "Lady Godiva;" "The Thief of Bagdad;" "The Jackknife Man;" "The Sky Pilot;" "The Magic Flame;" "Kitty Kelly;" "Kentucky Days;" "The Highest Bidder;" "Gloria's Romance;" "Mighty Lak a Rose."

A Message:

To Those Who Already Have the Details of This Contest

Having the complete details of this contest, and having read those details carefully, there are only two things that could make you hesitate to enter this $5,000 prize contest.

The first thing is that the contest is just "too easy"—appears "too simple"—and "there must be a catch about this somewhere."

If this is what is stopping you, please be advised that while this contest DOES appear easy, it actually requires an hour or so of good, hard concentrated thought, and most people, so the psychologists tell us, do not concentrate an hour on anything. In fact, the learned college professors don't mince matters. They come right out and say that most people CAN'T concentrate for an hour.

If it is because you feel that too many people are already entered, you can completely dismiss that thought. There is only one person competing in this contest for every hundred persons we anticipated would compete.

If it is because some friend has advised you against entering, it might be a good idea not to take that advice too seriously. Practically all big prizes are won by people who entered AGAINST THE WISHES OF THEIR FRIENDS.

One of the first things a newspaper reporter learns upon interviewing people who have just won prizes in contests is that virtually all prize-winners enter "against the wishes of friends."

A real GOOD friend wouldn't object to helping you solve the cartoons. See how many of your friends will help you work out the 30 cartoons, in order to compare your own answers with the answers they work out.

All in all, if you feel that you have a chance—GO TO IT. No matter how young or old you are, how poor or rich you are—sooner or later you learn that whatever you accomplish must be done on your own hook. Even if you go into this contest and lose, you are a lot better off than if you hadn't tried.

If you want to win out—YOU MUST TRY.

MISS HARD-BOILED

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Raquel Rojos, a fiery young beauty in revolt against her home in Hermosa on the Mexican border, accepts a loan of money from Jack Farrell, an adventurous engineer, and starts for New York, where Farrell is to join her later and marry her. She is aroused from the lethargy into which she has fallen on the train by the voice of a porter. "Baggage, lady! New York baggage!"

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER X

Lights had transformed New York City into a glittering calcium day when Raquel found her way through Grand Central Station to the street.

She was still squirming under the eye of the porter, to whom she had to confess she had no baggage. He must have noticed as much when he made up her berth. Probably thought it was up ahead, in the baggage car. When he perceived she had only the clothes she was wearing, although she had come across the continent, his face was an open letter of perplexity.

The glittering lights the rush and bustle and surge of crowds each seemingly bent on going in an opposite direction dispelled Raquel's resentment against the porter.

She was bewildered, but she was happy. Happier than she could ever remember being.

Farrell had told her she must get a taxicab outside the station. Order the driver to take her with all possible speed to the Hotel Brixton. Farrell was known there. He would get word to the manager to be on the lookout for her. She must be brusque with the driver of the taxi. So he would not suspect she was a stranger in the city. Otherwise—well, the underworld contributed its quota of buzzards to the traffic problem of the cities.

A car stood at the curb in front of Raquel. She approached the driver.

"Take me to the Hotel Brixton," she said. "And hurry, please."

The driver gave her an arrogant glance and was about to speak. Up and down the length of her figure his eyes traveled. Then he tossed away the cigaret he was smoking, stepped down from his seat and handed her into the car.

Raquel Bewildered

She leaned back against the cushions. Gave herself over to the wonder of the lights. Whole canyons lined with them. Rows of them reaching farther than her eye could see. Swift motion of the cab, velvety, like its cushions.

And people! Clots of people, swarms of them, streams, whole armies. So many that just to [illegible] their number made her dizzy. And she, Raquel, was [illegible] them. An ant in a vast [illegible] stain of ants. No matter how high and wide and outwardly impassable a mountain might look, it had its trails. She would soon enough find them. Even on this bewildering mountain.

Farrell had told her it must not be longer than ten minutes from the station to the hotel. Raquel was a good judge of time. Ten minutes. She had been in the cab more than twice that time. She pressed her face against the window. A winding road with tree and bushes and stretches of open space. Occasional benches. People lounging on them. People strolling, too, past the lights.

Raquel tapped sharply on the window behind the driver. He slowed the cab, slid back the pane of glass beside him.

"The Hotel Brixton," Raquel said crisply. "It's taking you a long time to get there."

"Yes, ma'am. I'm taking you through the park. Thought you'd like the drive."

Reaches Destination

"How dare you," frigidly, "when I told you to hurry?"

"Well, you asked me to haul you, didn't you?" There was a challenge behind the words.

"Get me to the Brixton at once!"

She must not be scared by this blundering fool. Nor must she argue with him. How had he dared take her out of her way? She had spoken to him shortly. Had practically commanded him to take her where she wanted to go. He had sized her, head to toe.

Then she knew. Her clothes. Cheap. Countrified. Her clothes had marked her for what she was. A stranger. A pretender. He thought he could trick her. Maybe he was one of the buzzards Farrell warned her about.

Raquel moved forward in the seat. Her eyes were divided between the driver and the place through which they were passing. The cab swerved perilously to the left. They were back in the city again. She breathed a sigh of relief.

Presently the car stopped before a canopy which covered the sidewalk from a building, brightly lighted, to the street. A tall man in a wine-colored suit with gold braid hurried through the wide open doors, dived to open the cab door.

Raquel descended, stepped to where he was already speeding up the engine to be on his way.

Embarrassment

"How much?" she asked. There were bills in her blouse. Some change tied in her kerchief.

"Nothing." The leer of the fool. "This is a private car. I was waiting for the boss. The next time don't you go picking up joy-rides when you don't know who's doin' the drivin'."

The car ground into gear, shot down the street. Leaving Raquel to smart between embarrassment and tingling anger. With the man in the wine-colored suit striving to straighten out the grin that would quirk up his face.

"Your bag, miss?" he inquired politely. "Did you leave it in the car? Maybe I can catch him—"

"Roho. R-o-j-o-s."

Why had she told him her name? Rojos. Hermosa. She had left all that behind. If she had been quick enough. Now it was too late. Just as well perhaps. Farrell must have given it anyhow.

The manager, smug and ingratiating, was thinking: "Spanish. With those black eyes, that white skin, that red mouth like ripe raspberry stain. A little beauty. Farrell's a picker, all right."

He said: "This way, Miss Rojaus. The boy will take you up. Let me know if you don't like your room. I understand you are to be with us quite some time."

"Oh, yes." Raquel voiced a hope.

Wonderful Room

The boy who showed the way to her room wore a wine-colored suit too. It fitted him as if he had been poured into it and it was gay with rows of brass buttons. Raquel wondered why he did not go, now that he had taken her into her room, turned on the lights, saw that the silver bottle on the table was filled with water. He lingered at the door, expectantly.

"Thank you." It was if she had said, "Go, please."

The boy took the hint, closed the door behind him noisily.

Raquel looked about her. There was a bed, green with painted flowers. A bureau to match, low with a wide, flawless glass on top of it. Did she really look like that? Slim. Her skin was a shade darker than a magnolia flower. How thick her hair was, and black. Like shining coal. There was a desk with writing paper. A telephone and a lamp with a yellow shade on a table by her bed.

Two doors. Raquel opened one cautiously. A shiny white room with a white tub in it. Turn this handle and hot water ran. Turn this one and the water was cold. She could bathe every day, twice a day if it pleased her. Perfumed soap, and towels enough to last a month.

The other door now. Just as cautiously she opened it. A closet with hooks in it. Big as her room in Pancho's shack. A clothes closet. Empty.

DIVISION CHIEF VISITS 176TH AT CAMP

Gen. Price Gives Streamers To Pittsburgh Regiment; Sees Exhibition Drill

TOBYHANNA, Pa., July 26.—Maj. Gen. William S. Price, Jr., commanding the Twenty-eighth Division, Pennsylvania National Guard, visited the Pittsburgh soldiers in camp yesterday, having motored from Mt. Gretna. He was met by Col. W. R. Dunlap, the regimental commander, while the Sixteenth Field Artillery fired a salute of 13 guns.

Gen. Price presented the One Hundred Seventy-sixth Field Artillery, of Pittsburgh, with streamers to be attached to their colors for the campaigns engaged in by the present Pittsburgh regiment and its predecessors.

MOUNTED REVIEW GIVEN

The general witnessed the mounted review and exhibition drill of the Sixteenth Field Artillery, given in honor of the One Hundred Seventy-sixth and One Hundred Tenth regiments, encamped here.

While the Sixteenth Field Artillery batteries are officially numbered, they are usually reported as the Black Horse, Brown Horse and Gray Horse batteries. This regiment, one of the showiest field artillery outfits in the country, is frequently called upon for exhibition drills at Madison Square Garden, New York, and Washington.

The Black Horse battery gave a regular field artillery drill while the Brown and Grey Horse batteries gave the fancy riding hall drill and field and fired several salvos and a volley.

ANNUAL MUSTER TODAY

The annual inspection and muster into the Federal service takes place today and Gen. Price will stay over for that feature of the annual field training. The battery streets are beehives of activity, cleaning equipment, clothing, tents and policing areas.

There is no excursion on the Lackawanna to New York today so the Pittsburghers will "thumb their way there or stay in camp."

112TH HONORED

MOUNT GRETNA, Pa., July 26 (AP)—The One Hundred and Twelfth Infantry of the Pennsylvania National Guard was honored yesterday for its part in two wars.

Brig. Gen. Edward C. Shannon as guest of the One Hundred and Twelfth decorated the regimenttal colors with one streamer for its part in the Spanish-American War and with five streamers for its services in the World War. After the ceremony the regiment passed in review before Gen. Shannon.

Parades and reviews were to be the principal feature today, when each unit here was to pass in review before the regimental leaders and instructors from the United States Army.

A board of inquiry is continuing its investigation of the damaging of a cottage by a one-pound shell. The board, in a partial report, established that the field piece from which the shell was fired had been pushed down too far by the recoil from previous shots. The change in the gun's angle, it was said, permitted the shell to travel much farther than previous shots.

TARIFF BRINGS CASH PROBLEM

WASHINGTON, July 26.—(Universal.)—Declining customs receipts under the new Smoot-Hawley tariff bill today were bringing new problems to Treasury officials.

Receipts from July 1 to July 22 totaled only $16,468,417, compared to $36,455,837 for the same period last year.

Although a drop of more than 50 per cent, customs officials said this was only a temporary condition which always follows enactment of a new tariff bill.

Nevertheless the entire year of 1930 has shown a slump in imports. If customs receipts fall off to a marked extent, added revenue must be picked up from taxes or other sources.

When the Smoot-Hawley bill was enacted, experts estimated the revenue from it would reach $585,000,000 for the current fiscal year, or only slightly under the receipts of last year. As yet they are unprepared to revise these estimates.

Failure to Make Arrest Blamed For Killing

NEW CASTLE, Pa., July 26.—Failure of three constables to make an arrest resulted in the killing of a merchant here, according to Justice of the Peace A. H. Gilmore, of Newshannock Township. Gilmore asserted he had had a warrant for the arrest of Eugene Sullivan, now charged with the murder of A. J. Nader, on a serious charge since June 14. Had the constables to whom he gave the warrant exercised their authority, Sullivan would have been in the county jail on the night he is said to have struck a blow which caused the death of Nader, Gilmore declared.

Master Mysteries

By ARTHUR HOERL

The Muffled Shot

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE.

Jerry Murdock is mysteriously shot and killed at Gordon Stiles' palatial home in Manhattan Beach, a suburb of New York. The only clues are a bullet hole in a window drape and footprints in the snow. A number of well-known Broadwayites are at the house for a week-end party. Eric, the Stiles' butler, implicates Diana Amberson, a dancer. She admits having gone into Murdock's room just prior to the murder. Dr. Wattles, police medical examiner, reports "doped" water in the two rooms adjoining Murdock's. Capt. Blake questions the Quincys, who occupied one of the rooms. Robin Dale elicits the fact that Murdock financed a tea-room operated by Dolores Quincy. Later, as Diana Amberson is being arrested, Bert Forrest, a playwright, confesses to the crime. The murder weapon is found in Forrest's room. Gordon Styles identifies the revolver as his. Forrest is arrested. Later, Rita Kane, a showgirl, claims the Murdock estate, stating she is Jerry's wife. While Blake and Dale are questioning her at her apartment they are all startled by the entrance of Duncan. Murdock's former servant. Duncan, cornered, explains that Rita is his sister. He tells of Murdock's affairs with Dolores Quincy, Diana Amberson and Diana's sister, who is now Mrs. Gordon Stiles.

Now Go On With the Story.

CHAPTER VI.

As those who read Robin Dale's report of the Murdock case will remember, the Tuesday following the crime brought the most startling disclosures of the finale of the tragedy. The Daily Journal carried the complete story, omitting the important part the reporter himself played in the solution of the mystery, in the early morning editions on Wednesday.

The solution had been worked out in the main on Monday night in the library of Robin Dale's apartment. He spent the night there alone with pad and pencil. He wrote down the actors in the tragedy and motives—it would have been more simple with fewer motives. Then from the facts he knew and the testimonies he had heard, Robin Dale made a careful summary of the opportunities of the various actors to commit the deed. In addition, there was the method by which the crime was done; that he arrived at by a process of elimination . . . actor, motive, opportunity and method—there were the four factors to be arrived at. There were plenty of each, but it was like an involved algebraic equation which had to be solved in order to determine the unknown quantity, which was the murderer. It became a thrilling game, during which Dale cast the factors about like chessmen on a board, until finally the answer stood out boldly and clearly. There were certain obvious assumptions he had made and these were borne out by Tuesday's happenings even more definitely than he had assumed.

With a grunt of satisfaction he put down Q. E. D. under the last thing he had written and then set a match to the sheets from the pad and watched them flame up and crinkle into black ash.

Late in the forenoon on Tuesday, Robin Dale was at headquarters. It was quite important for him to hear what Mrs. Grace Stiles would say. He was surprised to find Wilfred Sands with Capt. Blake. The district attorney shook Dale's hand cordially and, of course, asked what he thought of the case.

"I'm sure Capt. Blake will have the case all ready to hand over to you before very long, Mr. Sands."

"He has something up his sleeve, Sands. He's acting too meek entirely," Blake countered.

"Mind if I have a cigaret while we wait, captain?"

"Go to it, Dale."

"All right! Where do you keep them?"

Wilfred Sands held open a case with a smile. Dale took one and smiled back. Finally Mrs. Stiles was announced. There were a number of preliminary questions before Capt. Blake came to the point.

"Mrs. Stiles," he asked frankly, "were you very friendly with Jerry Murdock?"

"Then there must have been some reason for his presence at your home."

She realized she was trapped. She would have been either way she answered Blake's leading question. She became noticeably more agitated as she searched helplessly for an answer. Finally the detective captain spoke again.

"I'm not trying to agitate or frighten you, Mrs. Stiles, but there must have been some reason for inviting Mr. Murdock if it was not friendship. It will be easier for you to tell the truth and it may be a great help to us. Mr. Forrest may be shielding someone, and if so you'd want to help exonerate him, wouldn't you?"

She glanced pathetically at Wilfred Sands and Dale, like a woman on the verge of baring a tragic secret. Then, suddenly, she decided, and spoke with determination.

"He insisted upon coming to the party and I was afraid to refuse him. Once—before I was married," she added quickly, "I thought I loved Jerry Murdock. I wasn't ashamed of it and was foolish enough to write a lot of silly things to him. He still had the letters and held them over me. Saturday night he brought them with him. I wondered you didn't find them in his room, and it has worried me."

"The letters, then, have disappeared?" Blake remarked. Here was an entirely new tangent to the case.

"I didn't get them. Jerry insisted upon my going to his room. If I did that he promised to give them back to me. Instead, he started making love to me, and that is when Diana entered the room. She remained silent as to the reason because she was shielding me. She sent me out of the room and said she would deal with him. All she would tell me next morning was that he refused to give up the letters."

"Show him in!" was all Blake said.

In a few seconds, Gordon Stiles was ushered into the room.

"I understand—" he stopped when he saw his wife. "They told me you were brought here. Why was this done?" he continued, addressing himself to Captain Blake.

Blake felt the delicacy of the situation, being hesitant to explain what Mrs. Stiles had just confided, especially as she had thus far been shielded. The lady sensed this and courageously took the matter out of Captain Blake's hands and explained everything to her husband. As she finished he smiled down at her gently and patted her arm.

"I know about the letters, dear. I bought them from Murdock for $10,000 in cash. We had arranged the matter Saturday afternoon."

"Then you were in Murdock's room on Saturday night?" asked Capt. Blake.

"Yes, at 10 minutes to 2. I remained long enough to arrange our affairs and to order him to leave the house early the next morning."

"And you gave him $10,000?"

"In cash, Capt. Blake."

"Motives—puzzlin' motives," Dale was muttering to himself. It was after Gordon Stiles and his wife had left that Capt. Blake brought up the missing $10,000, for the money had not been found on the person of Murdock or in the room he occupied.

"Just another puzzlin' motive, captain—but you can eliminate it—robbery was not the motive. If I may suggest this, you'll have the murderer behind bars tonight.

"As it's worked out, you'll never be able to prove the case except by tricking the guilty party. If you'll do this I'll promise you rich results: Send out an order for the appearance of everyone who was in or about the Stiles house on Saturday to appear in this office at eight tonight. Then, be sure your murderer doesn't escape, detail a man to every one of them at once, because one or more of them may resort to flight when your order arrives."

Capt. Blake knew Dale did not ask this without reason, and it was so arranged.

Robin Dale hurried to the office and sent the following anonymous note to every one of the persons ordered to appear before Capt. Blake that night:

"The police know who killed Jerry Murdock. A FRIEND."

Why did Robin Dale send the anonymous notes? What became of the missing ten thousand dollars? How did Robin Dale figure who was the guilty one? How was the crime committed? What was the real motive? Who made the footprints in the snow? Read the solution in the Sun-Telegraph next Saturday.

SOLUTION TO

A Perfect Crime

By ARTHUR HOERL.

Promptly at 4 Robin Dale faced the group in the office of the vice president of the Atlas Trust Company on Fifth avenue. In that group were Capt. Blake, Sergt. Jardin, Skelly and Mr. Robertson, in addition to the official of the bank.

Robin Dale looked at the clock as though awaiting someone. The front door opened and another man entered, a tall, somberly-clothed individual. It was Inspector Albert Graham. He spoke, for a moment, in low tones with Capt. Blake. Finally Dale began.

"Anthony Druid is the man you want, Capt. Blake. Except for one tiny slip it is possible that you would never have gotten him. That slip was a matter of some five or six minutes. If he had refrained from telephoning for steamship tickets for a woman he already knew was dead he might have escaped the penalty of his crimes. The tickets were ordered at 10:35, or five minutes after he saw Mrs. Robertson a corpse."

Jardin was behind Robertson and had him gripped by the arm.

"The rest is easily explained. The Harry Gibbs murder was really the murder of Phillip Robertson. Harry Gibbs, without any question of doubt, went down with the Delia. In fact, that gave Mrs. Robertson and her lover the chance they wanted, the opportunity for a perfect crime, whereby they would not only be rid of an unwanted husband but also acquire a desired inheritance. That is where Mrs. Robertson made her mistake. She placed Druid in the security of a new identity and made him master of the fortune. I was shelling an egg at breakfast and the whole thing came to me as though I were taking the mask off Robertson's face, and the hideous thing underneath made me sense Mrs. Robertson's danger because at 10 that morning everything was to be in Druid's hands.

"The rest explains itself—the notes were self-written. I don't think your prisoner will even try to deny his guilt, Capt. Blake."

Finished!

Warrick Morgan dropped in at the Varsity Club.

"Back again—unscathed from the social maelstrom?"

The speaker was a kindly, gray-haired gentleman. Warrick Morgan sat down near him. He was Dean Rawlins of the university that had given Morgan a diploma with a magna cum laude.

"Unscathed. Dean—and utterly fed up."

"Fed up? That is what the higher education did for you those five years back?"

"Don't be a purist, Dean—there's no expression in our mutilated tongue quite so expressive. If I said that I was sated, would it have had the punch?"

"It would not. May I inquire as to what particular thing or things have—er—fed you up?"

"Society girls. All alike—talk, act and think alike. The only difference is in the brand of chemicals they use for their hair and the shade of lipstick they use."

Dean Rawlins laughed mildly. He had been fond of Warrick Morgan, and still was fond of him, for that matter.

"What seems to be the trouble?"

"Too much finishing—after the modern manner. My memories of mother and my older sister, away back, was that they were purely and sweetly feminine. They dressed attractively, smiled serenely and laughed innocently."

"And now?"

"And your method of reforming all this, Warrick, what is it? You were always clever at outlining cures and remedies and reforms in your essays — how now?"

"Not enough interested to want to reform them, Dean. Just disgusted. Without a bit of ego, I'll say I was chased, trailed, pursued, invited and nearly trapped scores of times by scores of different more or less humans of the alleged gentler sex, until I was, I repeat, fed up."

Disgusted

"This begins to look serious, Warrick, my boy. You were out this season looking for the right young lady, I take it.

"This season and seasons before, but I'm through. I can't get interested, much less thrilled, by any of the girls I have met. They drink more and stronger cocktails than I enjoy, they can cuss more eloquently, tell more daring stories than I'd tell at a stag, and are just pests, all annoying and some nauseating."

"This," Dean Rawling commented, mildly, "seems to be quite a serious state of affairs. I take it that you would like a wife."

"I have considered it, but I haven't seen any girls who offer anything more than an added expense, a gadabout and a constant worry. I suppose I'm actually prehistoric in my ideas. I had in mind a sweetly feminine girl, who would be wifely, enjoy [illegible]-er—"

[illegible] you will have to do [illegible] neval Red Man did [illegible] in the matter of selecting a horse."

"How was that, Dean?"

"He crept out to the feeding plains, selected a likely-looking animal, lassoed it, trained it, and there was the horse for him that he wanted."

Morgan chuckled over this.

"You don't have to lasso girls today, Dean—you have to flap your hat at them and yell 'Shoo' or 'Scat' to scare them away."

"According to your report, society girls, but how about the other sort—the quiet little girls of the hinterland?"

"Are there any?"

"Plenty, I am sure."

"Not necessarily such a terrible picture. Country girls aren't unsophisticated nor gawky, but many of them are quiet, sensible, properly demure and lovable."

"Such a girl, sent to a very select finishing school for a term or so might be the solution. Thanks, Dean, only I'm not sufficiently wrapped up in this idea of matrimony to go to that bother."

Friends happened along then and they discussed other matters.

Meets Girls

Warrick Morgan did not intend to remain in the city for long. His season in Florida and then his trip abroad had bored him even more than he had told the Dean, and there was much truth in what he had said about the society girls he had met and their pursuit, since they knew all about his very old family and his very great fortune.

He had a rather extensive place up in Canada. He liked to get up there in the spring, because trout and salmon fishing was his best loved sport and he thoroughly enjoyed the evenings by his great fireplace with the books he had always loved.

The last five miles through the woods at his big place where he held such extensive fishing rights as well as owning much property were over a road that would tax the sturdiest car.

When he got to Bob Wilson's place he was relieved. It was already getting dark. Of course he was welcomed heartily by Mrs. Wilson.

"Bob didn't expect you until tomorrow, Mr. Morgan. He's over getting your place ready," Mrs. Wilson told him.

"Just let me stretch my legs, and take a couple square-tails out of the pond for my dinner and I'll curl up on the sofa here for the night," he told her.

"What's this—an increased family?" he asked. He knew the Wilson boys were grown up and gone away to homes of their own.

"My sister's girls, Mr. Morgan. They've come to live with me—they've lost their mamma."

The girls were around 18, he guessed. Norma and Heloise.

"Rather splendid place to live, now isn't it?" Warrick asked.

He saw a great deal of those two girls after that. Mrs. Wilson brought them over with her every day to help her. Warrick noticed that Heloise was extremely beautiful and shy. Norma was more active, and if he talked with her she looked directly at him and smiled pleasantly. She also talked intelligently.

Suddenly Warrick Morgan had what he called the "big idea." He recalled what Dean Rawlins had said—the simile about the Indian catching the wild horse and breaking him. Why not send the beautiful Heloise to a select finishing school and then marry her? Here was a beautiful, unsophisticated, unspoiled girl, who would make the ideal wife.

Sent to School

He took Mrs. Wilson into his confidence and Heloise was sent off to school. Norma took it quite for granted.

"I'm glad Heloise got the chance. She is so beautiful and she deserves it," Norma said.

Warrick went back in July. He intended to come up in the Winter for some hunting, and he did, but Heloise was still in school. Norma was there and used to come over to his camp on snowshoes. Norma was strong, redcheeked and bright-eyed. She talked a lot about how well her sister Heloise was getting along.

"She will be home in the Spring—about the time you are up for the fishing, Mr. Morgan—you'll be delighted, I am sure, for with all the advantages of that famous finishing school she is going to turn out wonderful."

In the Spring Morgan went back to his Canadian property and again arrived at sunset at the Wilson place. He stopped to catch a few trout for dinner. Norma went down to the pond and watched him cast. She took three of the best trout back. When he followed right after this Norma had finished dressing them and was cooking them.

It was a week later that Heloise came back. Her uncle brought her up from the village in the buckboard. Warrick Morgan was on hand to greet her.

"Hello there," she said and then looked around. "My, I had forgotten it was so horrid here," she said.

Inside the house Warrick Morgan talked lightly with her. He noted the superabundance of rouge, powder, lip-stick and mascara. When she opened her suitcase he saw the cigarets and a silver flask.

Mrs. Wilson didn't say much, she was rather grim. Bob Wilson said, "What the hell's happened to you?"

Becomes Angry

After the dinner Warrick and Heloise took a walk down the road. As soon as they were around the bend Heloise stopped.

She eyed Warrick insolently at first, and then with an entirely different expression. Suddenly she put her arms up about him.

"Oh, you sweet daddy," she said. "It was wonderful. Come on now, kiss me. Heloise needs her petting! Heloise knows her vegetables and just what all of this means—sweet boy!"

Warrick took her wrists and held them down.

"Another one!" he said. "For years I've been dodging hideous parodies of young womanhood just like you—they certainly 'finished' you in the strictly modern fashion at that place."

"What's the matter? I thought you was regular, and you are just a dummy," Heloise said angrily.

They went back to the house. Norma was sitting on the doorstep. Warrick held the door open for Heloise. She stumbled with her high heel on the threshold.

Norma stood up. There were tears in her eyes.

"Oh, you haven't quarreled, have you?" she cried.

"Norma," Warrick said, "I've been pretty much of a cad, but now I am wise to myself. Will you go to the village with me tomorrow and marry me?"

Local Topics of the Day

Some Things Pittsburghers Are Thinking About.

Sad as are the drownings that have occurred in the Pittsburgh district during the present hot spell, there is comfort in the reflection that they are not as numerous as they would be if as few people knew how to swim as was the case several decades ago. At the beginning of the century not many girls, for example, were able to swim, as compared with the number who are now at home in the water. The increase during recent years in the knowledge of life-saving and resuscitation methods has also helped to reduce the number of deaths from drowning.

The reunion of former residents of the Point and the numerous other community, corporation and family picnics that are now being held show a spirit of good fellowship that is to be commended. Especially praiseworthy are the family and neighborhood reunions that bring together relatives and old friends who rarely see each other except at these gatherings.

Representative M. A. Musmanno has rendered a real service in the movement for repeal or modification of the Blue Law of 1794 by learning exactly what the situation is, as regards Sunday observance, in the other states of the Union. It should reassure those cautious and conservative souls who would like a more liberal attitude towards Sunday activities but hesitate to embark on a new policy to know that 38 states have "blue laws," but show no signs, nevertheless, of being used for the bow-wows.

Capt. L. J. O'Neill, who has just been elected president of the Pennsylvania Police Chiefs' Association, is superintendent of the Carnegie Steel Company's police force, the largest body of "coal and iron" officers in the state. They do not often figure in the news, for O'Neill has not permitted and does not permit them to perform police duty or even to wear their uniforms outside of the company's property. The good judgment he has shown in this matter offers an index to his character, and suggests why his fellow police chiefs have honored him with the presidency. If other commanders of coal and iron police had shown as good sense as O'Neill, crimes like the Borkowski killing would have been prevented and the private industrial police system would not be in such disfavor.

Officers of the street railway men's union are said to have expressed disappointment that the Pittsburgh motormen and conductors voted in favor of continuance of the seven-day week. The public will be disappointed, too, since, if they had voted to change to a six-day week it would have meant steady employment for 300 men who will now have to be placed on the "extra list." It was, of course, a hard question for the men to decide. To save the 300 it was necessary for the others to take a cut in wages. It is to the credit of the many men who voted for the six-day week that they were willing to make the sacrifice.

There are few, if any, public men in Pittsburgh whose solicitude would be felt, in the event of illness, more than Dr. William M. Davidson, superintendent of the public schools. The news that his physicians, who were greatly concerned over his condition, report him to be much better will give general relief. Dr. Davidson has done more, perhaps, than any other man to improve Pittsburgh's schools. And besides that, he has a pleasant personality which has made him a popular figure.

The resignation of Judge Thomas D. Carnahan re- moves from the Common Pleas bench of Allegheny County another jurist who has served the people long and well. Judge Carnahan is deservedly popular among members of the bar, not only for his fairness, but also for his good humor and courtesy. Young and inexperienced lawyers have always liked to try cases in his court, because they knew their mistakes would be corrected from the bench with kindly consideration, not with impatience and sarcasm. Judge Carnahan demonstrated that a man can be an able judge and at the same time good-tempered.

It was like adding insult to injury to Mifflin Town- ship when the seceding section joined Munhall Borough, for it took along with it the township's municipal building, located in the annexed area. Our compliments to the township on its plans for the new town hall, for which ground has just been broken. The printed description indicates it will be a useful edifice.

The Ambridge "movie" audience who filed out of the theater quietly and methodically when fire broke out set an admirable example of cool-headedness. While the pictures were being enjoyed the films burst into flame and fire flashed in the auditorium. Often, amid such circumstances, there is a fool to shout hysterically and create a panic. The Ambridge folk were fortunately all sensible, and showed how easily a theater may be emptied if people keep their heads.

B. & O. Also Offends Against Cleanliness

How sorely the people of Pittsburgh are tried by the smoke and noise of the steam locomotives that pass through the city is made plain by comments on the announcement that the Chamber of Commerce, under the leadership of Robert Garland, will undertake to persuade or force the railroads to electrify their lines here.

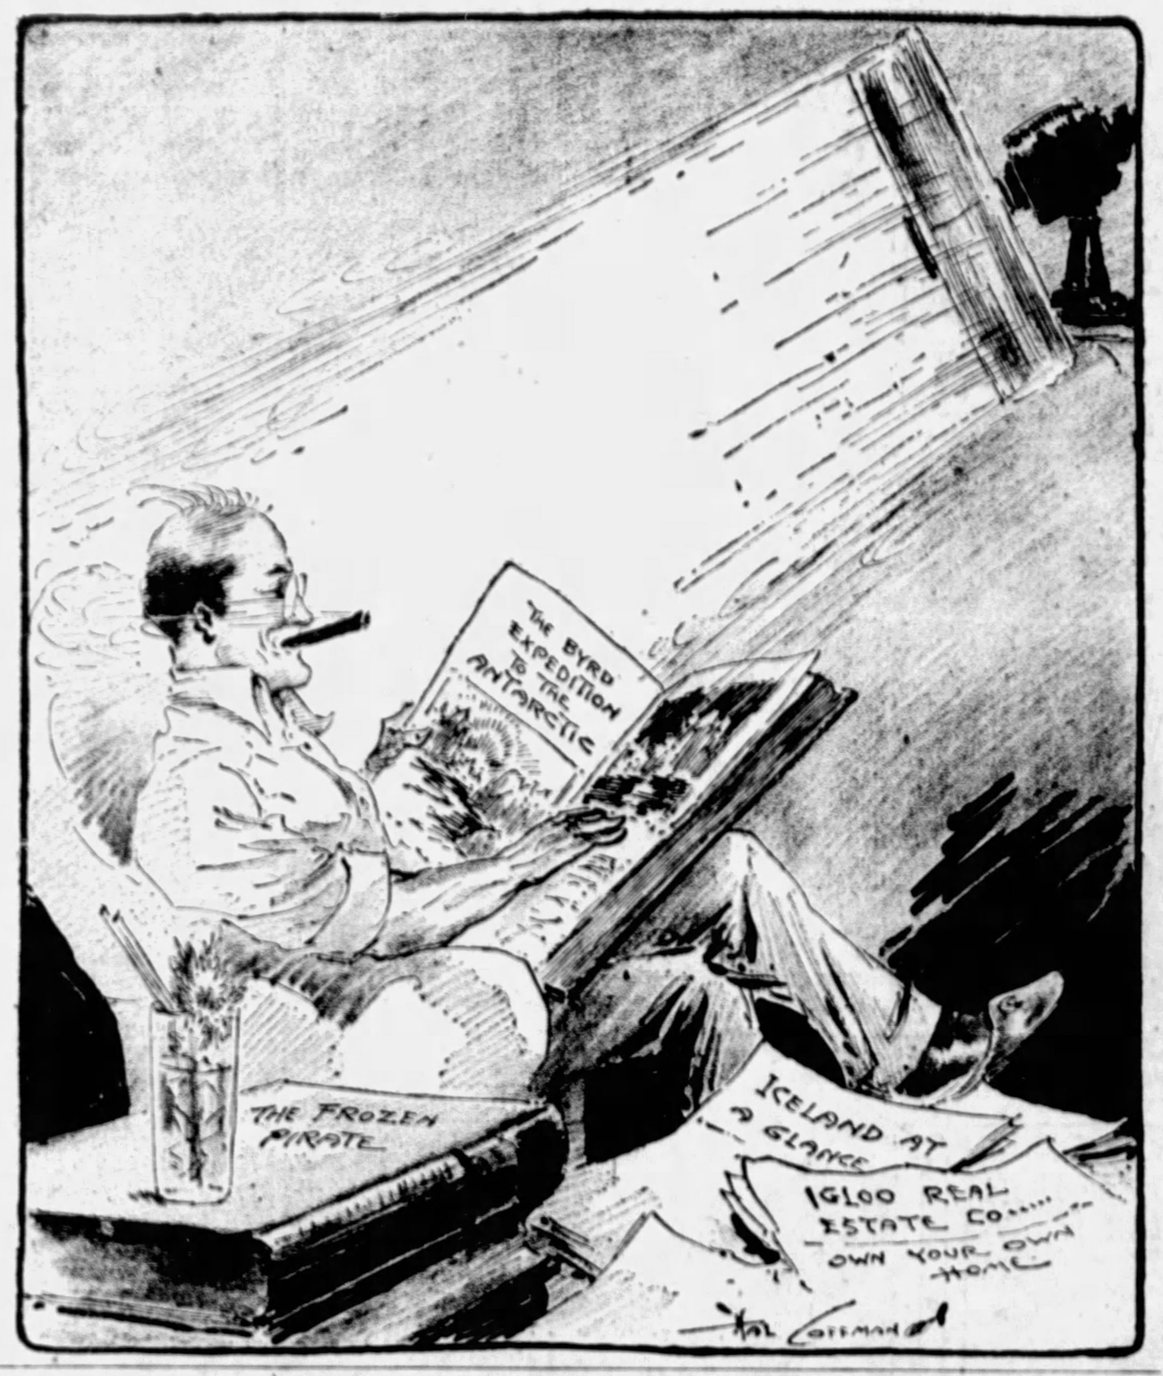
While the Pennsylvania is the chief target for criticism, which it has invited by neglecting Pittsburgh while electrifying 426 miles of track in Philadelphia and other cities, the Baltimore and Ohio is also arraigned as an offender against cleanliness.

In a letter to the Sun-Telegraph Leah A. Stoop, of Morewood Gardens, expresses surprise that the people of Pittsburgh permit great locomotives, belching forth thick clouds of smoke and puffing loudly, to pass through Schenley Park, throwing cinders over trees and lawns and sending out soot to soil the beautiful buildings of the Oakland civic center.

Dr. Martin W. Pilgram, of Sharpsburg, writes that the Pennsylvania Railroad is now sending heavy freight trains through there and Aspinwall—trains that formerly would have been sent by another route—and that some of them require as many as three locomotives. The smoke and noise, Dr. Pilgram says, are making Aspinwall a disagreeable place in which to live, and the citizens pray for relief.

These letters may be taken as typical samples of public sentiment. The Chamber of Commerce will win the people's gratitude if it carries on its campaign energetically and successfully.

The Power of Mind Over Matter -:- By Hal Coffman



"Bugs" Baer Says:

The Hot Weather

We like to read doctors' advice in the newspapers because it is only three cents a visit.

"Bugs" Baer

They also destroy romance, illusions and bridge parties because that is one thing your best friends will tell you. When you haven't seen a pal in 15 years you don't want to recognize him by his breath.

Another doctor, and there's plenty of them picking out the preferred parking spaces, advises the scattered delegates to eat oyster crackers and peanuts.

He medicates that one oyster cracker will supply enough inertia to fix you up for an hour of mental effort.

Why, one oyster cracker will not even provide the energy needed for an hour of mental effort by the oyster.

He parlays this statement with the information that one-half of a salted peanut will accomplish the same beneficial details.

Now, we are not quarreling with doctors. Their diagnosis is correct in nine cases out of 10 and is usually corroborated by the jolly old post-mortem. Doctors have kicked us around like a guest at a Soviet picnic for years. When they were exhausted they called in their boy friends, the surgeons, who take plenty of turf with their irons and have never been known to replace a divot.

But we would like to see Mr. Brisbane write one of his columns on half a peanut or hear Mr. Hoover breathe out an inspired oyster cracker speech on a national hook-up.

How can you go into executive session with an oyster cracker? They are all clam stews but we don't want to see an oyster cracker wearing a high, silk hat.

It wasn't so long ago that Ethel Barrymore claimed that she owed all her beauty, ability and success to Melba toast and the 18-day diet.

Well, we saw Ethel the same year. And she must have sliced the toast too thin.

She should have scoffed it by the loaf.

We're glad we got that in because it looked as if we would have to finish an article without insulting somebody.

And, like a Boy Scout, we must do a daily good deed, even if we have to think until way after midnight.

SCIENTIFIC RESEARCH

By Archibald Henderson

The inventor, who finds out things which have not been known before and puts them to practical use for man's benefit and development, is the most useful member of society, judged from a material standpoint. The inventor is really a leader, a man who goes before. To succeed, he must be endowed with imagination, patience, ingenuity, independence and courage. He must not be dismayed because some authority has said that such and such a thing is impossible.

Inventors are nowadays almost daily doing things which "authorities" have said could not be done. The world today is bristling with successful inventions put to scientific and commercial uses, which had been pronounced impossible.

A vast amount of research, much of it haphazard, useless or repetitive, is being conducted in the laboratories of colleges and universities. Besides this, there is a positively colossal amount of industrial research being carried on in the leading countries of the world, notably in the United States, England, Germany and Japan.

In the United States alone, there are approximately one thousand organizations for industrial research. As pointed out by the late Admiral Elmer A. Sperry, the famous inventor, in Toward Civilization, these organizations include the government bureaus, educational institutions supported by endowments, trade associations, special groups in an industry cooperating on a special research job, private laboratories maintained by individual manufacturing companies, and commercial laboratories which may be called into consultation for special work. A reliable estimate places the annual expenditure for such research at $200,000,000.

It should prove stimulating to the general public, in this astounding age of steam, coal, oil, electricity, machines and power, to realize the magnitude of the efforts now going forward under competent guidance and with adequate financial support, for wresting from Nature the secrets which will prove useful to mankind.

In the great Bell Telephone laboratories in New York City, for example, 5,000 persons are employed and $50,000,000 is expended annually. Other great research laboratories are those of the General Electric Company, General Motors, the du Pont de Nemours Company and the Aluminum Company of America.

Then there are the two great federal bureaus, expending several millions of dollars each annually, the United States Bureau of Standards and the United States Bureau of Mines.

It would take volumes to describe the scientific and research work supported by the five great American foundations; the Rockefeller Foundation, Carnegie Institution, National Research Council, Mellon Institute and Engineering Foundation.

Many millions of dollars are expended annually for research in colleges and universities, and by progressive trade associations.

Worst Story I Have Heard Today

By WILL ROGERS.

It's hard to tell when a prize fighter intends to foul the other fellow. There's always a lot of difference of opinion about it. There's bound to be at least one guy that claims that there wasn't any foul. That's the guy that done it.

They tell about a big fighter that knocked another one cold in the ring. There was a lot of excitement, and the fellow that was still on his feet strutted around to his corner.

"Dunno," says one of his seconds. "There's some trouble, you know."

"Well, he can't say I fouled him, anyhow!"

"No, he can't for a couple of hours yet. But the referee can. You forgot to hit him."

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

I lay in the grass. It was not very tall grass, but, lying there with my face pressed to the ground, it seemed as high as the forest and as filled with mystery and menace.

Here were long, winding tunnels and secret dens and yawning pits. The pits were, perhaps, an inch deep and the winding tunnels were but slits of shade between the tangled stems of weeds. But I was so close to them that they seemed as huge and terrible as any jungle. Among those tunnels monsters rambled and coiled—great, hairy spotted beasts—fanged serpents—winged carriers of death. Tiny ants and spiders and inch worms they were, in reality, but magnified to horrible importance by my nearness.

For long, sleepy moments I stared at these horrors as another bug might have stared. I had forgotten the power and beauty of freedom which were my right as a man. I could see and feel only the dark and dreadful little world that lay beneath the grass stems—in which life squirmed, trapped in darkness.

Later, toward evening, I climbed a mountain. Not an easy climb. A narrow, steep trail, tangled in chaparral. But presently I came out into the clear. Far below me the land stretched out and out—tumbled hills—deep ravines—small clearings set like golden tiles in the dark bronze of the forest. And over it all twilight flowed in a quiet, green tide.

Many things lay under that tide. Farms lay under it, with the going and coming of men and their hopes and fears. The forest lay under it, quickening now with the stealthy night life of the beasts. And, somewhere, my little patch of grass lay under it—with its mimic dangers that had seemed so real and near from my bug's-eye view. All this lay below, but, from the mountain top, my view was so wide that none of it clutched me. I knew it was all there. I knew there was ugliness there as well as beauty—pain as well as joy—but they no longer filled my senses with their terrible importance. They had gone back to their natural place in the scheme of things. They were all of a piece with the rest of that resting, stirring twilight hour of life.

Then presently, the twilight deepened into amber—the deep ravines flowed with wine until all the land lay drenched in purple. And the sky which had been a brittle, white film opened. Opened, veil upon veil, into the dark corridors of the night. And all about me, like lamps hung low along the endless miles of space, the great stars burned—sapphire, emerald, topaz, diamond white.

And my mind opened—as the sky had opened. While I lay in the grass, with my face pressed close to the earth and darkness, I had seemed a part of that earth, bound by its dumb and helpless terror. But now, that I sat with the earth below me and my head in the stars, I felt that I, too, was an inhabitant of space—moving along a wide and endless trail.

And it came to me that life was like that. Just a matter of perspective. If one lay too close to the ground—too close to self—any trifle was a tragedy. But if one chose a mountain—no matter how hard the climb—one rose above pain and took one's place in the stars.

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS.

The Worth of a Song

How can we gauge the worth of a song,
How say if it will live
In triumph through the ages long,
Or be but fugitive?

Is it by any fixed degree
Of rhythm or meter's law
A song survives or must it be
Of beauty without a flaw?

Some poets with rare wonder wrought
Their every singing line,
And some with calm, majestic thought
Shaped melodies divine.

Not words and thoughts alone can make
True song; these are but part.
For deathless song must ever wake
An answer in the heart.

THE SCIENCE OF LIFE

By H. G. WELLS
In Collaboration With
Prof. Julian Huxley and George P. Wells.

In our opinion it is manifest that they are not. In the finished product, the new individual, there is a complete chromosome outfit in every cell of the body; yet in one place the outfit produces a blue eye, in another blond curly hair, in a third a snub nose, and so on.

The gene controlling eye-pigment has nothing to say on the bridge of the nose, and vice versa. There is obviously a very important controlling factor at work—the place in which the genes find themselves.

H. G. Wells

A neat demonstration of this was made by Hertwig, a German embryologist. He compressed the fertilizer eggs of a frog between glass plates so that at the eight-cell stage the cells were all forced into one layer instead of being arranged in two tiers of four.

He found that if the resulting plate of cells was released from pressure, at the next division it formed two tiers of eight cells each. And from such eggs, perfectly normal embryos grew.

An example of how the genes require special local conditions before they will work is afforded by the so-called Himalayan breed of rabbits, whose pattern is recessive to the normal. These are white in color except that the tips of the nose, ears, tail and feet are black.

Now, why should the recessive gene in question blacken parts of the bodies and whiten others? If we shave part of the skin we find the answer; for the fur will grow white if the rabbit is kept warm, and black if it is kept in the cool.

The action of the gene depends on temperature. At the normal body temperature it causes the fur to grow white, while at the tips of the extremities, which are slightly but measurably cooler, it causes the fur to grow black.

During early development the embryo becomes parcelled out into different local conditions. Then the genes get to work, moulding and finishing the ground plan. But the first rough laying out of the future body is apparently not due to the genes; it is due to the protoplasm of the egg, or, as we have seen, to the more or less accidental impact of external conditions on the egg protoplasm.

A large and tangled subject, the Physiology of Development! Soon, we hope, it will straighten out, and the interplay of gene and protoplasm, of organizing zone and encumbering yolk, of mechanical stress and internal secretion, will be better understood.

SEC. 6. LIMITATION AND CONTROL OF GROWTH

For men and most higher animals, growth and development have very definite limits. Why is this?

As we have already seen, the cells of a bird or a mammal in a tissue-culture continue to grow indefinitely, long after they would have stopped growing if left in the body.

The great riddle of growth is not why we grow, but why we stop growing. Many, perhaps most organisms, never stop growing. Our greater familiarity with higher vertebrates and insects misleads us in this matter. Such diverse creatures as trees, fish, molluscs and crustaceans go increasing their dimensions so long as they live, though at a steadily diminishing rate.

The American lobster, for instance, may produce eggs when under eight inches in length, and eleven or twelve ounces in weight, and then continue growth until death overtakes them, which may not be until they have reached sixteen inches and over five pounds in weight, while the males may reach twenty-two inches, and nearly twenty-five pounds.

Many fish, such as the ordinary trout, show similar disparities. And the extremes may be even greater; in the common Hermit Crab, the largest breeding females are about four times the length of the smallest, and so about sixty-four times their weight.

In spite of their continued growth, however, there is a limit in size in these animals, albeit it is set not at maturity as it is with us, but at death. The limit is set by the relative rates of growth and ageing: if growth slows down quickly, and, ageing is rapid, the animals will be cut off by death before any of them has passed even a moderate size.

Abroad With A New Yorker

By O. O. McIntyre

LONDON—For excellent and worthy reasons, everybody in London has become a "cheese parer." In America the term is "tight-wad." It is, of course, born of economic necessity. The British exchequer has been scraped to its bottom. Nearly every stock in the United Kingdom has "passed" dividends.

No person is immune from the saving spree—not even the royal occupants of Buckingham Palace. His Majesty and his very popular Queen. The Times this morning tells of the royal pair cutting down the domestic costs of the palace £2,000—or $10,000—a week.

We drove past Buckingham this morning and after seeing so much depressing poverty there was a slight mockery in the impressive pomp of the Victoria monument and the lofty masonry of the palace itself. Such royal trappings, of course, are why much of England has listened to the perfidious tinkle of Soviet gold—hence strikes and further economic depression.

Last year, the year before that and the year before that and, yes, the year before that dinner parties were just one long gabble about British and American stocks over here. This year the silence on financial topics is almost painful. People are doing little eating. And no talking at all.

A British friend of mine of long standing is somewhat typical of what is going on here. He occupied chambers in aristocratic St. James square, wrote when the spirit moved and lived handsomely on a stock bearing income of more than $14,000 a year.

He is now living in a shabby walk up flat in Bloomsbury without a man servant, can find no market at all for his usually salable articles and his dividend income is less than $600 a year. Multiply this by millions and you get a fair idea whither the Britannic winds are blowing.

People who ate in smart cafes are dining in A. B. C. restaurants. Former motorists are using the bicycle. But I can say this for England. So far I have heard less whining than one heard after that memorable Wall Street market crash last October. I still hear it. The British have gu—, that is, viscera.

* * *

I have always been a hound for finding out the income of people who interested me. On every newspaper I used to pal with the cashier. So: Parliament allows the King and Queen 417,000 pounds a year as salary but before they have anything to do with the spending thereof Parliament itself deducts 360,000 pounds for "household expenses, salaries and special charges." The actual amount paid to the King and Queen yearly is $110,000—which isn't so much after all. Nor is it so little.

London remains the home of the flamboyant penny-dreadful weeklies. A hundred or more flourish here. Lord Northcliffe built up his famous newspaper properties from profits of his below-stairs weekly called "Answers." It still flourishes. Across the top of one of the weeklies today in screaming red type was: "This copy insures you for 1,000 pounds against fatal railway accident." You learn by careful perusal, however, of the terms that you must be holding a copy of the periodical in your hand at the time of the disaster. The trick is that in most catastrophes everybody drops whatever they are holding.

The "Agony Column" of the sedate and scholarly Times continues as one of the most curiously interesting documents in modern journalism. From its columns today I salvaged this one: "Mollie—Leave off the henna and the war paint and I'll come home. I thought I was marrying a demure Scottish lass instead of a red headed spit-fire. Otherwise I'm going back to Indiana.—Stanley." We hope the candle lights still gleam along the Wabash.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

Mr. Man, have you ever recognized the fact that after the children are of age and on their own that your wife needs something to take up her time?

Of course, you think that keeping up the home is enough and making you comfortable is a part of it.

There are a few women so domestic in their tastes that they would be satisfied with the daily routine of home and housekeeping.

But a mother who has sent her children to college and has seen them following an urge to be and do something in the world has entered into their plans so completely that when they are gone she wonders what about her own life.

If she has brains she will not be satisfied with the mere round of social pleasure many women follow.

It is possible to be completely busy with all the clubs and church work and life can become a whirl of things, but what does it mean in net result?
